In Wadsworth Land. Still the Hounds Run. T. R. Used to Follow Them. Two Miracles.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

BIG TREE, Geneseo, N. Y., Oct. 29.

THIS BEAUTIFUL Geneseo Valley is the land of the Wadsworths, the family that gave its name to the fort, now antiquated, that guards the entrance to New York Harbor.

Here the late Maj. Austin Wadsworth long ago established, at his own expense and without any dues or "capping" from anybody, the best pack of fox hounds in America, and they ran, and still run in the finest hunting country in America. Every other hunting country will deny that, in accordance with custom.

THE FARMERS and their sons all rode to hounds, sold good hunters, and every one of them knew Austin Wadsworth as well as his own brother.

A majority lived on his and other Wadsworth farms, including those of former Senator Wadsworth who will shortly be elected to Congress from this district, in spite of a prohibition candidate especially nominated to run against him.

THIS OLD, interesting country was America's great wheat country before Kansas and the real West were invented.

In the beginning of the last century, James Brisbane, father of the late Albert Brisbane, built through here the road that ran from Buffalo through Batavia and on to New York, using the road for his stage coach line. One of his drivers, Fargo, helped start the Wells-Fargo Express.

There were many opportunities in those ancient days, as when the better part of Rochester was sold for six hundred dollars. That would be a good purchase even in these days.

THIS PLACE is peacefully unlike New York, Chicago, Los Angeles. Nothing changes, except that automobiles are parked diagonally, where horses once were hitched.

The people that were here are here now, or their children or grandchildren are here to represent them.

BILL BUTREY still tells you —as he did forty years ago:

"A fox knows more than a man, and you have to be pretty smart to keep track of foxes."

He has done that very thing for nearly half a century and does it still, seeing to it that a dead cow or horse is dragged out to the gulleys where the vixens have their cubs, keeping track of the fox tribe.

IT IS A land of politeness. With one frank exception, everybody says:

"You have not changed a PARTICLE."

Lew Weyman, called "Smoky" by intimate friends, who works for Ed Servis, who boards horses, is the frank exception. He can remember every horse of consequence for forty years back and says:

"You remember Groveland and Dr. Cary's Nicotine, and Harry Smith's Tingaling and Harry Hamlin's Duke, and Sam Howland's Ontario that held the high jumping record and his sister Ladybird? And there was another wild one, Sally Preston. She was like Groveland.

"Say, when either of these two saw a fence, you had to sit down and ride, because they were going to jump it, no matter what it was. Sally Preston belonged to a man named Brisbane, did you know him?"

When you tell him how well you knew, he says:

"Well, I never in the world would have known you."

Poole, who was Austin Wadsworth's huntsman, is huntsman still, but now in charge of a pack in Detroit. Theodore Roosevelt hunted with him, and Theodore Roosevelt's brother, father of Gov. Roosevelt's wife, and all the Theodore Roosevelt children.

The hounds went out yesterday. The meet was at Avon, home of Mrs. Herbert Wadsworth. E. L. Woodward, of Leroy, N. Y., is master of hounds now. His intelligent father created a useful product which, in turn, created many millions of dollars, and Woodward, M. F. H., an ardent sportsman, has a fine pack of hounds and good whips, with his hunting country well panelled.

It would surprise you to know what a difference 30 odd years can make, even over "chicken coop" jumps, with perfect take-off and landing.

RETURNING TO the outside world, you observe that Paris is still "seeking an arms pact with the United States" and the United States continues its foolish meddling in Europe, China and points between and all the way around.

GERMANY, HAVING more or less disposed of the Versailles Treaty, alarms Europe with her energetic trade war and tariff.

Five European nations are lined up against that tariff. France has just launched the world's fastest trans-Atlantic liner, to outstrip the competition of Italy and Germany.

This "richest, greatest, bravest, most enterprising country" does not count in that competition. We should hardly dare to launch a new rowboat.

MUSSOLINI celebrates the tenth anniversary of Fascism, with praise deserved. Those that said, ten years ago, that Mussolini would be another Rienzi were mistaken.

A MIRACLE happens and everyone takes it for granted. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., talks to millions of Americans in favor

GRID CROWD JAMS CITY

EX-M'KEESPORT GIRL ILL IN N. Y.

The 25-year-old McKeesport-Broadway beauty and estranged wife of Gordon Godowsky, today was in Bellevue Hospital, New York, as a result of a pajama walk in the cold dawn of yesterday. The girl was taken to the hospital by Patrolman Eugene Turro, who reported finding her clad only in thin silk pajamas and barefooted at the Manhattan approach to the Williamsburg Bridge, according to news dispatches from New York.

Identified as Yvonne Hughes by New York police, the girl told physicians at the hospital, where she is still under observation, that she was living in the Hotel Thorndyke, 209 West Forty-sixth street, New York. Further, she would not or could not say.

Miss Hughes, whose father, William J. Hughes, lives at 701 North Grandview avenue, McKeesport, eloped in February, 1928, and married Godowsky, the son of a famous composer, who turned against his son because of the marriage. They separated in December, 1929, "because of a clash of temperament."

At her hotel, it was learned she had registered as Yvonne Hughes, from McKeesport, about two months ago and that she had been out of work.

At her father's home in McKeesport it was said she was still in New York, but her family knew nothing of her illness.

Miss Hughes, the family said, had appeared in "Showboat" and several other Ziegfeld productions and had played a part in the stage show, "The Trial of Mary Dugan."

HOOVER HAILED IN CLARKSBURG

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

International News Service.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 29.—President Hoover was greeted by a large crowd here this morning during a five-minute stop en route back to Washington.

There was a band and a huge sign carrying the legend "Welcome Hoover." Mrs. Hoover was given large bunches of chrysanthemums.

The President commented upon the large crowd so early.

"I believe the people of West Virginia rise earlier than in any other state."

Throughout his trip, he said, he had been greeted by large crowds which showed "the indication of the country on November 8." He said:

"You have been generous."

The President again called attention to West Virginia's dependence on the tariff, saying the Democrats propose to wreck it, while the Republicans propose to preserve and strengthen it. He said:

"I ask you in which party do you think the welfare of this country rests."

Someone in the crowd shouted:

"Give us more of it."

Mr. Hoover said the country had shown improvement "every

Reunion With Smith At Albany Cements Old Friendship

International News Service.

ALBANY, Oct. 29.—Smiling and happy because his old-time friendship with former Gov. Al Smith had been completely re-established and all the bitterness of the Democratic National Convention forgotten, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt left today on his whirlwind invasion of New England.

In one of the most dramatic incidents of the presidential campaign, Roosevelt and Smith sat side by side in the executive mansion last night for nearly an hour, chatting together in complete harmony and renewing the friendship which was shattered nearly a year ago.

MAIL FLIER WARNS OF FIRE

Widow Flees Home, Flames Destroy Dwelling

Seeing flames shooting through the upper floors of a house as he sped over Bridgeville early today, a mail pilot, flying low, circled the community several times until the roar of his motor awakened residents.

The fire destroyed the home of Mrs. Victor Broughton, 50, a widow, at Cuddy, near Bridgeville.

Although no official report was available at the County Airport, attaches said a mail plane en route from Columbus to New York, piloted by W. L. Smith, 35, was due over Bridgeville at that time.

WIDOW FLEES

Awakened by smoke when the blaze broke out in a bedroom on the second floor, Mrs. Broughton, a widow, was forced to flee in night attire.

Mt. Lebanon volunteer firemen aided Treveskyn firemen in combatting the blaze. Damage was estimated at $5,000 by Constable Phillip Urbani, of Treveskyn.

FIREMEN OVERCOME

Two volunteer firemen and Police Chief C. C. Davies, of Forest Hills, were overcome by gas while fighting a stubborn fire which partially destroyed a storage house of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company on Ardmore boulevard early last night. Loss was estimated at $1,500.

The firemen overcome were Milton Olson, 27, of Chalfant Borough and Stanley Wessel. All were completely recovered today, according to Westinghouse officials.

The burned building was near the main research building of the Westinghouse company and was used for storing chemicals.

Firemen of the Westinghouse company, Forest Hills and Chalfant Borough were summoned.

Macfadden Airplane Strikes 'Phone Line

TOWANDA, Pa., Oct. 29.—(INS.)—Bernarr Macfadden, publisher and exponent of physical culture, whose principal diversion is piloting airplanes, today planned to fly to Dansville, N. Y., after nearly wrecking his plane when it struck a telephone line in a landing here last night.

Macfadden brought his plane, carrying three women executives from his New York offices, safetly to earth after it hit the wires at the state airport. All were uninjured and the machine only slightly damaged.

Span From West End To North Side Open

Although it will not be dedicated until December 1, the new West End-North Side Bridge over the Ohio River was open to pedestrian and vehicular traffic today.

Work on the bridge, authorized in the people's bond issue of 1928 and under construction for two and a half years, will be completed late next month. The span, designed to divert North Side traffic from the Triangle, cost $3,540,000.

Woman Hit By Auto, Driver Arrested

Struck by an automobile while crossing Frankstown avenue, near Laschall street, late last night, Mrs. Catherine Boyle, 75, of 6624 Frankstown avenue, was in Pittsburgh Hospital today in critical condition. Vincent Liebegott, 22, of 7223 Race street, who police said was the driver of the automobile, was arrested.

AUTOIST DIES IN RIVER PLUNGE

CLARION, Pa., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Crashing over the bank in his automobile, Edward Corbett, of Pittsburgh, drowned in the Clarion River. For several minutes he clung to the top of the sedan—ripped from the chassis in the fall—but he lost his grip and sank before help arrived. The body was recovered a half hour later.

Police said Corbett, alone in the car save for a pet dog, failed to make a turn leading to the river bridge. The dog, tied in the machine, apparently drowned with him.

Mr. Corbett, 49, was a construction engineer and had left Pittsburgh for Clarion Thursday. He planned to return to his home here yesterday. He was a member of the board of trustees of the Fourth Presbyterian Church. He leaves his widow, Elizabeth Newton Corbett, three sons, Edward A. Corbtt, Jr., of New York, and William and Donald, both at home.

Shenango Dragged For Drowned Hunter

GREENVILLE, Pa., Oct. 29.—The Shenango River at New Hamburg is being dragged today for the body of a man, believed a coon hunter, drowned late last night. I. R. Bortz, of Transfer, member of a coon hunting party, said he saw a stray dog on the river bank and heard a splash. His party focused a flashlight on the river and saw a man flailing the water. He sank.

POLICE SLAY 2 PETTERBANDITS

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 29.—(Universal.)—Two unidentified "petting party" bandits were dead today from bullets that struck them as they stepped into a trap set by New Jersey state troopers.

The bandits, police said, had been preying for weeks upon couples love-making in parked cars on dark roads near Blackwood, 10 miles from here.

Troopers Henry Austin, Ray Osborne and Eric Hosseck were assigned. Austin, who has a fair skin and regular features, was made up as a pretty "girl." Osborne was "her" escort. The troopers last night drove to a lonely spot and parked. Hosseck hid in the woods bordering the road with a shotgun.

A sedan carrying five men pulled alongside, two men leaped out, pointed guns at Osborne and his "girl." Osborne shot one bandid dead immediately. Austin drew a gun from the folds of his dress and shot the other bandit dead.

As the sedan with the three others sped away, Hosseck fired the riot gun at it.

PITT-IRISH FRAY DRAWS 65,000 FANS

Colorful Throngs Here For Football Classic Paralyze Traffic

Out of the skyscrapers and stores and homes of Western Pennsylvania more than 65,000 men and women and children, afflicted with football fever, today swept on to Pitt's Stadium.

They jammed the streets of the Oakland area and the downtown thoroughfares, traveling by trolley, bus, automobile—even bicycle. Police stood at every corner and intersection guiding the seemingly endless cavalcade. Intermittently, the blockade allowed traffic to move only a foot at a time.

It was a happy, radiant, expectant throng, for Pitt was playing Notre Dame.

Gay colors—the blue and gold of both Pitt and Notre Dame—were espoused by their followers. Fair maids here and there wore the gold chrysanthemums of victory.

The throngs began to move shortly after noon, reaching the crest shortly before the 2 o'clock game time, when Oakland's streets were masses of football fans.

Melting into the thousands of worshippers of the gridiron gods were celebrities and visitors from all sections of the nation.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot and a party came from Washington to see the battle, while the famous movie star, Joe E. Brown, was the guest of John H. Harris, Pittsburgh motion picture executive. More than 200 boys and girls came from Rochester, N. Y., guests of the Rochester Hearst newspapers and radio stations.

A special train bringing with it the Notre Dame band came from Chicago, bringing a Mid-West delegation.

On the emerald-green turf of their own stadium, surrounded by a roaring circle of some 65,000 of the faithful, the Golden Panthers of Pitt this afternoon face the sternest test in the university's gridiron history as they confront the formidable, victory-satiated football force that is Notre Dame.

The contest, the biggest game in the nation today, the sixth to be played between elevens of the local and South Bend institutions, finds the home forces in the role of underdogs, with the Ramblers installed favorites by odds that range from 3½ to 5 to 1. Of the past encounters, Notre Dame has won four and tied one.

The contest will get under way promptly at 2 o'clock.

The contest will be broadcast on two national hookups. Graham

Two Suspects Held In 'Circle' Holdup

Two of the alleged Honeymoon Circle bandits today were held for court on charges of robbery. Charles Boley, 28, of 876 Braddock avenue, and Ed. Boyle, 22, of 716 Washington avenue, both of Braddock, were arrested after Helen M. Yost, of 626 South Parkview avenue, told detectives she recognized them as the bandits who held up John Miller, of 434 East Eighth avenue, Munhall, and her in their car on Tuesday evening. Detective Thomas Morgan testified the men had been identified by four victims.

Roosevelt W. Va. Gain Follows Hoover Visit

By COLE E. MORGAN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(Universal.)—Gov. Roosevelt staged a comeback in West Virginia this week.

This came right on the heels of President Hoover's journey through the state a week ago on his campaign excursion en route for his Detroit speech.

In the face of new returns in the nationwide postcard Presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States, it cannot be said that the President's swing through West Virginia profited him.

Today 2,672 new West Virginia ballots, a veritable flood for a single week as compared with previous West Virginia returns, poured into the poll headquarters here.

Gov. Roosevelt received 1,449 and President Hoover 1,223, a Roosevelt majority of 226. This brought the total Roosevelt West Virginia lead to 2,181, out of 14,681 ballots recorded.

The last West Virginia tabulation, published last Sunday, showed a return of 728 ballots, with Hoover coming within 18 votes of receiving as many as Roosevelt. However, today's returns indicate the state once more can be regarded as reasonably safe for the Democratic candidate.

Mexican State to Ban Children for Poor

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Dr. Salvador Mendoza, one of the drafters of the new civil code, announced today that state authorities had decided to draw up a law to establish a system of birth control in Vera Cruz.

Dr. Mendoza, an attorney, said the various provisions of the law and penalties for violation had not been settled upon as yet, but that a state birth control office would be provided to carry out the plan.

As now sketched, the attorney said, the law would require parents wishing to have children to appear before the board. An inquiry would be made as to the size of family, ability to provide and educate and condition of the health of parents.

The measure would prohibit children to extremely poor, incompetent, or defective parents.

The state government planned, Dr. Mendoza said, to appoint a committee of obstetricians to discuss with Margaret Sanger, the birth control advocate, how best the code could be applied.

INSULL JUGGLING OF PENNA. UTILITY MILLIONS BEFORE QUIZ

'CHECK-KITING' DEAL, EATON COMMENTS

Senate Counsel Scores Penn Power Loans To Shaky 'Parent'

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Oct. 29.—A Pennsylvania chapter in the amazing story of Samuel Insull's financing was on the records of the Senate Investigating Committee today, as a result of the testimony yesterday of W. A. Miller, secretary-treasurer of the Penn Central Power and Light Company of Altoona, an Insull subsidiary.

Through loans of approximately $3,000,000, O. K. Eaton, counsel for the committee, attempted to trace the source of this money and its ultimate destination, but was lost in a tangled web of intricate financing when the committee adjourned yesterday until November 10, with Miller still on the witness stand.

"CHECK-KITING" CHARGE

Eaton flatly charged to the committee that the sum of $2,440,000 apparently repaid to the Penn Central by the Electric Management and Engineering Company and then loaned by the solvent Penn Central to shaky Insull allies—at least one of which has since gone under the hands of receiver—was not represented by any actual money. Eaton rapped at the witness:

"This was just a check-kiting proposition."

Miller would not concede this, but said the transactions might be classed as "simultaneous loans."

Following these transactions, it was developed that the Penn Central, which next month—apparently because of an inability to realize on its loans—must borrow money to pay the interest on its bonds, had engaged in what was designated as a "rearrangement" of its capital structure. The common capital stock of the company was reduced to a par value of $1, or a total of $166,000. The difference between this and the original book value of the stock was $8,019,945, creating what Eaton called a "paper" capital surplus to take care of possible losses from loans of other Insull subsidiaries.

'100 PER CENT DIVIDEND'

By a strange coincidence, this new par value of $166,000, was the exact sum set aside by the company for common stock dividends so far in the current year. In other words, according to W. D. Rush, Eaton's auditor, the dividend amounted to 100 per cent on the new par value of the common stock.

Eaton further charged today that Insull holding companies controlling the Penn Central had so juggled finances that the Altoona Corporation recently was able to declare a preferred stock dividend. At future sessions of the committee, Eaton's investigators are prepared to testify that articles of incorporation of the company provide that the preferred stockholders shall have no votes unless their stock has failed to pay a dividend for one year. Issuing the dividend to preferred stockholders protected the holders of common stock, the Insull interests, from having control of the Penn Central pass out of their hands.

RATE INCREASE HINT

Miller was pressed to admit that these involved financing arrangements were designed, either to maintain a high level of rates to Penn Central consumers or to lay down a basis for a request for increased rates.

He would not concede this point.

Miller was unable to trace the ultimate destination of any of the loans made by Penn Central to the ramified affiliated Insull interests.

Each loan, Miller testified, was made at the direction of Insull officials in New York. Miller admitted that the Penn Central paid a dividend in 1930 of 31 per cent on its capital stock and of 25 per cent in 1931, and he said he thought these earnings were fair.

When the committee resumes its inquiry, the Thursday after election, Miller and other officials of the Penn Central will be quizzed in an effort to clarify the story which has so confused the committee. The Senators are particularly interested because of a desire to frame legislation which will control the operation of holding companies and give the Public Service Commission authority over security issues.

HOOVER BITTER IN NEW ATTACK

day since the adjournment of the Democratic Congress," adding:

"And if our strategy is not interrupted by a change we will win this battle against the depression—a victory for the American people."

Mr. Hoover's combativeness as the campaign enters its final stages is progressive!

Nowhere in this campaign, or in 1928, has he attacked his political opponents with such vigor as he did in Indianapolis last night before some 20,000 partisans gathered in the field house of Butler College.

The fact that he was compelled to share the political spotlight in Indianapolis with Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, speaking the same night for Gov. Roosevelt, seemed only to add fuel to the fire which the President directed against his Democratic opponent.

For the first time in the campaign, Mr. Hoover delivered a slashing personal attack on Gov. Roosevelt all along the political front.

He coined a new phrase to describe the Democratic candidate's utterance—"self-interested inexactitude."

In this connection he went at length into and quoted copiously from Gov. Roosevelt's speeches in the West.

Mr. Hoover charged that Gov. Roosevelt has shifted his position on the tariff and demanded "an apology from his opponent and the Democratic party "for the defamation to which I have been subjected for the past two years because I called a special session of Congress and secured an increase in agricultural tariffs."

Roosevelt Unaware Of Needs, Reed Says

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Senator David A. Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, in a campaign address in behalf of President Hoover last night said Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt "can have no idea of the needs of the common people."

The Senator praised President Hoover's tariff policies and attacked assertions on the tariff question by Gov. Roosevelt.

JOHNSON TALKS FOR ROOSEVELT

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 29.—(Universal.)—Declaring that "our government belongs to all its people and not to a privileged few, and that the republic's welfare is far more important than party regularity," Senator Hiram W. Johnson last night before an audience of thousands pledged the support of progressive Republicans to Franklin D. Roosevelt for President of the United States.

The meeting was the climax to the events of some days ago when a group of Southern California editors demanded Senator Johnson announce his position in the presidential campaign.

It was Senator Johnson's sharply defined reply to them, "I cannot and will not support Hoover," that led to the immediate revival of the Progressive Republican organization.

Davis Sees Tax Cut Through Liquor Sale

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Speaking at a Republican rally last night with Charles Francis Coe, author and lecturer, U. S. Senator James J. Davis pledged his continued effort to rehabilitate the anthracite industry and to reduce federal taxes.

Reduction of taxes could be accomplished quickly, he said, through revenue derived from the legalized manufacture and sale of light wines and beer.

RITCHIE URGES TICKET AS LONE HOPE OF U. S.

Wild Applause Marks Marylander's Speech For Roosevelt

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Indiana Democrats resumed their campaign today from participation in an old-fashioned political rally last night which culminated in an address by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, in which he told them:

"The only hope in America is in putting in a Democratic administration which can succeed."

Thousands of Democrats from throughout the state joined in the rally here, which was enlivened by a redfire torchlight parade that recalled campaigns of years ago. Then they filled to capacity Cadle Tabernacle, with its 15,000 seats.

WILD OVATION

After a wild 10-minute ovation for Gov. Ritchie had subsided, the Marylander launched into an attack upon the Republican administration for what he termed "mismanagement."

The Governor said he had come to Indiana as the campaign neared its close to dispel the efforts he said were being made "by Republican orators, from President Hoover down to convince the American people that the country will not be safe in Democratic hands." The Governor asked:

"Since when has it been dangerous to change a national administration which has shown itself incapable? The danger lies in continuing such an administration, not in changing it. Democratic success, instead of impelling the country, will save the country."

ATTACKS FORD

At one point the Governor attacked Henry Ford, the manufacturer, for what he said was:

"Black jacking employes into voting for Herbert Hoover."

He added:

"This plan of telling workmen how to vote is un-American, and, thank God, un-Democratic."

When the Governor denounced the Republican plank dealing with prohibition as being one that offers "no hope at all," and called the Democratic plank on the question one which "gives positive assurance," his audience wildly demonstrated its approval.

Gov. Ritchie made another thrust at the administration when he said:

"The man who tramps the street looking for work will not put up with the Republican administration any longer; the farmer who has no market for his crops, will not; the merchant who finds himself without customers will not; the factory owner whose fires are banked will not."

Roper Cites Need Of Ballot Upheaval

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Daniel C. Roper, former commissioner of internal revenue, said in an address here last night that "the country is in one of those revolutions which is decided and cured at the ballot box." He continued:

"Not to elect Roosevelt under these conditions would be to stifle the hope of the masses of our people and bring about a period of great danger during the next four years."

ROOSEVELT ON EASTERN TRIP

had been concluded, Al Smith was again the "happy warrior," and Gov. Roosevelt was more confident than ever that the Democratic national ticket would be swept into the White House on November 8 by the greatest landslide in history.

SHOW OLD HARMONY

It was their first conference since early last winter before Smith announced that he was a candidate for the presidential nomination. Both their actions and their words, as they sat beside each other on a sofa, made it evident that the "harmony conference" was "on the level" and that they were once again the pals of old.

Roosevelt and Smith shook hands at the recent Democratic state convention in Albany, but their meeting last night was far more impressive and left no doubt that their differences had been ironed out.

After they had been together nearly an hour, newspapermen were admitted. Smith had his right hand on Roosevelt's shoulder and was smoking his characteristic black cigar. Roosevelt smiled as he placed a cigaret in an ivory holder.

HEAR HOOVER'S VOICE

For a moment there was silence. Then the voice of President Hoover, speaking at Indianapolis, reverberated through the mansion as some one in the next room snapped on the radio.

Someone asked:

"Is everything harmonious now?"

Smith, smiling, answered:

"You don't see any blood on us, do you?"

The next question was:

"Can we say it's 'Frank and Al' again?"

Blowing a cloud of cigar smoke, Smith answered:

"You can go as far as you like. If we were Frenchmen we'd kiss each other on the cheek, but being Americans we just shook hands."

The harmony conference developed on the invitation of Gov. Roosevelt, who called Smith on the telephone a few minutes after the latter arrived in Albany last night on his way from Boston to Buffalo and asked him to come to the mansion. Smith replied:

"Sure, I'll be there."

A few hours later he was sitting in the mansion beside the man whose nomination he so bitterly opposed at the Chicago convention.

When the interview finally broke up, Smith slapped Roosevelt on the leg and said:

"You'd better get some sleep for yourself, Frank."

Smith said he had told Gov. Roosevelt the New England states he had visited in the last few days "were safe for the Democratic national ticket."

Smith commented:

"I've been telling Frank about my trip through the New England States. I told him in no uncertain language that the New England States through which I passed would be in the Democratic column November 8."

The states to which Smith referred were Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

GOING AFTER ALL

Smith had been doing all the talking up to this point but Gov. Roosevelt broke in with:

"Al and I have had a fine chat. I am certain the effect of his speech in Boston will be greatly felt in New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine. I told him I was going after all the New England States, and not just a few of them, and he agreed I was right."

Campaign Sets New Record for Loud Whispers

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The campaign has speeded up and presidential candidates are rushing around in carload lots.

Mr. Hoover would have stopped at more places on the map if his generals hadn't run out of pins.

Mr. Roosevelt is scurrying around like the sales manager of a chain store system.

The popular political speech has been shortened to five minutes off the caboose end of a Pullman car. The last three minutes are in motion.

The boys have only 10 working days left before the electoral college opens the sealed bids. The candidates will talk to as many people as possible. They realize the hornet has the right idea. Personal contact is the thing.

So, everybody is busier than a fiddler's elbow. It's a fight to the finish and no prisoners. We never heard such speechifying, roaring and yelling in all our born days. We've had cotton in our ears since July. So don't let anybody tell you it has been a whispering campaign.

FRENCH UPHOLD ARMS SLASH PROPOSAL

Deputies' Vote Backs Herriot Program For U. S. Pact

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service.

PARIS, Oct. 29.—Premier Edouard Herriot, backed by the Chamber of Deputies, today prepared France's new disarmament plan for presentation to the world, probably through the Geneva conference.

Its main outline, definitely making several provisions contingent upon favorable action on the part of the United States, was approved 430 to 20 by the Chamber early today in an over-time session.

The vote was on a motion indorsing "the principles of the League of Nations, a general reduction of armaments and the equality of peoples in international security, and the suppression of the private manufacture of arms."

Coming at the end of the disarmament debate, it served as a vote of confidence in Herriot's six-point plan, the main features of which were provisions for the abolition of regularly-recruited armies and the German Reichwehr, and the inclusion of the United States in a consultative pact with European nations.

During the debate Herriot stressed the connection between reparations and war debts. When one of his opponents expressed disbelief at this, Herriot replied:

"We have the texts!"

At first this was taken as a revelation of a secret agreement on war debts between France and the United States, but the Premier later explained he referred to the Lausanne agreements. The chamber was given to understand Washington was favorable to a reduction of the French debt to America.

MILLS OPPOSES 'DESPAIR' VOTE

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Ogden L. Mills last night warned against the casting of "a vote of despair and forlorn hope—the forlorn hope in the magic of a mere change."

Speaking before an overflow meeting of Republicans, the Secretary of Treasury claimed there were only two real issues in the presidential campaign: "The depression itself, and, secondly, the problem of recovery from the depression." America's only way out of the depression was in the re-election of President Hoover, he said.

Franklin D. Roosevelt will get the regular Democratic votes and those cast by those who say "things couldn't be worse," Mills said.

'Kingfish' Predicts 'Beer by Christmas'

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Senator Huey P. Long (Dem.), of Louisiana, in an interview here predicted "beer by Christmas if Roosevelt is elected. The "Kingfish" of Louisiana said:

"When Roosevelt's elected the cave-in will start. It's hard to believe how quickly the whole structure of prohibition will collapse. Then all the states except about six will repeal their own laws and we'll see plenty of drinking for a while."

Indianapolis Suffers Political 'Hangover'

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Paper-strewn streets and tattered bits of bunting remained today to remind Indianapolis of the greatest political spectacle they have witnessed for many years.

Partisans, still hoarse from cheering, discussed the speeches made last night by President Herbert Hoover, Republican, and Albert C. Ritchie, Governor of Maryland, who championed the Democratic candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The President's address was delivered in the mammoth Butler University field house, which accommodates 22,000 persons. Gov. Ritchie spoke in a tabernacle which holds 15,000 persons. Overflow crowds gathered outside each auditorium, but were enabled to hear the addresses through amplifying systems.

The Hoover parade was a martial affair with a platoon of the Culver Military Academy black horse troop and soldiers from the United States Army post at Fort Benjamin Harrison in the line of march.

The Democratic procession was filled with marchers bearing torches and banners and with floats. It recalled to veteran politicians the stirring marches during the campaign fought out by William McKinley and William Jennings Bryan when "free silver" and the "full dinner pail" were campaign cries.

'Babe' Ruth's Daughter Made Heiress by Him

BOSTON, Oct. 29.—(Universal.)—Three years after the tragic death of Mrs. Helen Ruth, first wife of Babe Ruth, "king of baseball," it was revealed today that his adopted daughter, Dorothy Ruth, is heiress to $27,000 under her will.

Dorothy, now legally adopted by Babe Ruth and his second wife, was made heiress to the fortune through the secret generosity of the baseball player, who turned over $31,000 to the estate of his dead wife when it appeared that the estate would not exceed $1,000.

This course was taken by Ruth, it was learned, because he was not certain of the adopted status of little Dorothy and wished to be certain that there would be enough in the estate to provide for her. When he married again, however Dorothy was taken into his new home under the legal status of an adopted daughter.

The first Mrs. Ruth was burned to death in 1929 in the home of Dr. Edward H. Kinder, Watertown dentist.

HARVEST REAPED BY CITY DOCKMASTERS REVEALED

CAROL SAVES ROYAL TITLE FOR HELEN

'For Michael's Sake,' King Explains as Conciliation Nears

By MAX PERLMANN
Universal Service.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 29.—Chances for a conciliation agreement between King Carol II of Rumania, and Princess Helen, the wife who divorced him, today appeared "slightly improved," it was stated in a high capital quarter.

The Council of Ministers, meeting with the King and the Princess, told her they would meet her financial wishes as nearly as possible, allowing her an annual civil grant of $50,000.

King Carol played knight errant to the Princess by turning aside an attempt by the Cabinet to deprive Helen of her royal title and the right to be addressed as "Your Majesty."

With stubborn cabinet ministers he argued that:

"For the sake of Crown Prince Michael, our child, Helen must be permitted to keep the title."

Not a single line about the meeting is appearing in the Bucharest papers today, but the Crown Council will announce it if any agreement of conciliation is reached.

Rumors that Helen is supporting a move to restore her brother, ex-King George, to the Greek throne, are advanced as reasons why she wishes to increase her financial resources.

BENNER PLANS TO HAVE POST ABOLISHED

Collection of Fees Only Duty; Keeps $2,500 Yearly

The city dockmaster, a forgotten man until charges by John Douglas, Jr., concerning wharf management attracted the attention of city officials, has been legally collecting for himself 75 per cent of the tolls on a city-owned dock operated by the Pittsburgh Coal Company at the foot of Eighth street, Allegheny River.

For 30 years, city dock masters have collected more than $83,000 for themselves and one-third as much for the city, the records reveal.

Immediate steps will be taken to eliminate the post, according to Thomas M. Benner, Assistant City Solicitor, who said a new ordinance will be required to eliminate one of 1900 still in effect.

REALTY MAN HOLDS JOB

The dockmaster for seven years has been S. A. Michalski, real estate dealer, of 1200 East Carson street. According to Controller James P. Kerr and Benner, with whom he conferred yesterday, Michalski, leaving the conference, refused to be interviewed. Controller Kerr later said:

"We brought the dockmaster in to see what he looks like."

Since 1926, the records reveal, Michalski has collected for himself $17,800 or more than $2,500 a year. Benner said Michalski revealed he was appointed by the late Henry Townsend, former City Property superintendent.

Four Favorites Survive In Bridge Cup Tourney

Mrs. Culbertson Out After Near Victory Over Sims' Team

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(Universal.)—The four teams picked by experts to survive the quarter final round of the Vanderbilt cup contract bridge tournament came through to victory last night and will play in the semi-finals today.

All but one of the four favorites had an easy time of it. That one, although it was composed of Hal Sims, said to be the greatest tournament player; Willard Karn, Harold Vanderbilt and Waldemar Von Zedtwitz, barely managed to retain its place in the tournament.

NEAR DEFEAT

With only one hand to be played, the opposing team, composed of Mrs. Josephine Culbertson, William J. Huske, Louis Watson and Samuel Fry, Jr., was 210 points in the lead.

Mrs. Culbertson, Huske, Sims and Karn had finished at their table. When Mrs. Culbertson and Huske played the hand they were set on their five-diamond bid.

At this point, it looked like a sure victory for the Mrs. Culbertson group, as it seemed as though the hand could not be made. However, Baron von Zedtwitz made the five diamonds and 400 points by very brilliant play.

EASY VICTORIES

The team of David Burnstine, Howard Schenken, Richard Frey and Charles Lochridge scored an easy victory, as did that of Julian Barth, Walter Malowan, Sherman Stearns and Hubert Boscowitz, and that of Ely Culbertson, Oswald Jacoby, Theodore Lightner and Michael Gottlieb.

The Culbertson team will meet the Burnstine team, and the Sims team the Barth-Malowan-Stearns-Boscowitz combination, in today's semi-finals. Forty-eight boards will be played.

The finals will take place tomorrow. It is expected they will find the groups headed by Culbertson and by Sims fighting for the cup.

'JAFSIE,' BETTY TO VIEW BARRY

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 29.—(INS.)—Figures prominent in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping case were to confront Arthur Barry, master jewel thief, at police headquarters today or Monday to determine whether they ever saw him before.

Betty Gow, nursemaid at the home of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and the last person to see the baby alive, and Dr. John F. Condon, of New York, the "Jafsie" in the hunt for the abductors, were to come here to look at Barry.

Two servants of the Lindbergh household, Ollie Whately, butler, and his wife, housekeeper, failed to identify Barry as anyone they had seen before.

MAN, SUICIDE, HAD 2 WIVES

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Mrs. Francis Sednick Lewis, bride of a week, today revealed to police a matrimonial tangle as the motive for the suicide of M. David Lewis, chemical salesman. Lewis swallowed poison and died in his automobile in a park Thursday.

The bride said she was married to Lewis recently in Scranton, against the wishes of her parents.

She declared Lewis told her he was divorced from his first wife, Mrs. Anita Lewis, 38, Philadelphia, mother of two children. Deputy Coroner George Neill said the divorce had not been granted.

The first wife appeared at the morgue to claim the body. She said she had been married to Lewis for five years and lived with him and their two children until recently. Police said she also denied there had been a divorce.

THUG HOLDS UP GIRL CASHIER

James Rhoades, 24, of 206½ Ella street, attendant at the Cities Service Station, Baum boulevard and South Negley avenue, [illegible] Homeopathic Hospital with a possible skull fracture inflicted by two robbers who seized 10 gallons of gasoline and two quarts of oil. Apparently frightened, the two passed up the cash in the register and fled.

Shortly after closing time last night an armed thug confronted Miss Jeanne Torris, 20, of 47 Lebanon avenue, Castle Shannon, cashier in Chapin's restaurant, 310 Diamond street, and handed her a note which read:

"Hand over the cash or I will shoot."

Miss Torris handed the gunman $82 and screamed as he fled from the restaurant.

Two bandits held up William Ford, of 1812 Charles street, attendant at the Downes Service Station, 1000 Columbus avenue, and robbed him of $5 early today.

'Holding Hands' Sign Of Ingrid Engagement

LONDON MARCH TO RESUME

LONDON, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Mindful of the rioting that has wrecked London's calm twice within recent weeks, police today arranged elaborate precautions against trouble when the nation's "hunger marchers' army" converges on Trafalgar Square tomorrow.

The marchers will stage their second demonstration tomorrow morning, reiterating their demand for abolition of what they declare to be abuses of the dole system.

Their first protest came Thursday and, although the 2,000 marchers were absolved of blame, a riot developed in which 60 or more persons were injured despite police precautions. The bobbies also had fought thousands of unemployed across the Thames from Parliament on October 18.

Five thousand regular police will be available for duty in Trafalgar Square, and in addition reserves of special and mounted officers will be stationed in the alleys, courtyards and passages dotting the maze of streets in the vicinity of Charing Cross.

Candy Woman Gets Glimpse of Royal Love-Making

By STEN HEDMAN
Universal Service.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 29.—Take it from a Swedish woman candy merchant—Princess Ingrid, of Sweden, is betrothed to Prince George, fourth son of King George V of Great Britain.

Mrs. Dale Carlian, who sells candy to the palace guards and is one of the commoners allowed to come and go through the palace gates, revealed today she is certain the young princess' engagement will soon be announced.

This woman candy merchant says she caught a glimpse of Princess Ingrid and Prince George coming out of the Upsala dome during the prince's recent visit here with the Prince of Wales.

Though the couple thought they were unobserved, Mrs. Dale Carlian declares she saw Prince George holding tightly to two fingers of Princess Ingrid's hand.

This, not only in Swedish royal circles but also by the public, is traditionally accepted as proof that a couple are engaged.

Mrs. Dale Carlian also says she is the only person who has ever asked Princess Ingrid directly whether she is engaged. This got from the princess a smile and the reply:

"I have no sweetheart."

LONDON, Oct. 29.—(Universal)—Princess Ingrid, 22-year-old daughter of Crown Prince Gustav Adolf, of Sweden, it appears certain today will marry into the royal family of Great Britain.

But if she is to become the wife of one of the sons of King George V, no one yet knows whether the bridegroom is to be the Prince of Wales or Prince George.

STORM PERILS SEARCH PARTY

SHERIDAN, Wyo., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—As efforts were made today to identify the frozen body of a hunter, another storm swept the Big Horn Mountains, marooning a party of 22 men seeking other lost hunters.

The body, believed to be that of Dillon McKinnon, 17-year-old Greybull (Wyo.) youth, was found on the western slope of the mountains. McKinnon was trapped with Fred Demmel, of Sheridan, and Dell F. Yoakum, of Columbine, in a storm that struck a week ago. The latter two still are missing.

Eight inches of snow was added to the 14 inches already covering the mountains, but no fear was felt for the safety of the searching party, headed by veteran rangers. They were camped a mile from telephone communication and had food, a sled and horses.

STOLEN PHOTOS RECOVERED

Mrs. Anna B. Barnett, of 6719½ Kelly street, again can exhibit proudly the pictures of her three grandchildren, after two months without them.

C. E. Slack, of Meadville, who found them along a road in Etna on his way home, more than a month ago, brought them to her.

Last August, in a downtown store, Mrs. Barnett's pocketbook was stolen. In it was seven dollars, also letters and the pictures of the children of her son, Andrew Rowley, of Tulsa, Okla., former Pittsburgh newspaperman. Detectives failed to find the thief.

Slack found the pictures, which bore identifying names, and wrote to Mrs. Barnett. He found no trace of the pocketbook or money.

Traffic Fatalities Show Decrease Here

Fatalities in Pittsburgh traffic accidents have decreased 29.1 per cent during the first nine months of this year as compared with 1931, by Lewis W. McIntyre, city traffic engineer, said today. The toll for September was nine, bringing the year's total to 90. Non-fatal accidents for the month were 19.5 per cent under last September, McIntyre said.

Flower Sale Aids Feeding of Children

Flowers were being sold on the streets today by Volunteers of America and their aides, for funds to food undernourished children at the Maud Booth Day Nursery, 500 West North avenue.

Club women and girls assisted the flower sale, the club women's group being headed by Mrs. A. L. Negley, of North Negley avenue.

Subway 'Joyrider' Sued for Divorce

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 29.—(INS.)—Mrs. Mary Quinby asked for a divorce from her husband, Oliver, because she said he took "joyrides" in the subway and then came home and beat her. She said Oliver spent from 16 to 20 hours a day riding in the New York subway.

Superior Court Judge Ernest Simpson listened sympathetically but denied her divorce plea.

Music Funds Stay In Baltimore Budget

BALTIMORE, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Elimination of the appropriations for the municipal band, the symphony orchestra and the colored symphony orchestra was suggested for reducing the city's 1933 budget. But Mayor Howard W. Jackson did not agree. He asserted music was needed "in times like these."

Goal of 'Y' Fund Campaign in Sight

The goal of the $60,000 emergency campaign of the Y. M. & W. H. A. is in sight, Edgar J. Kaufmann, general chairman, declared at a Hotel Henry luncheon meeting yesterday.

Mr. Kaufmann, urging the workers to continue their efforts, said the "Y" will not have to close its doors. The campaign ends with a rally tomorrow night.

7 Ousted Policemen Return to Beats

Seven patrolmen, dismissed in Mayor Kline's economy move several months ago, returned to work today. The patrolmen, reinstated to fill vacancies created by retirement of veterans this week, are Leo P. Dumont, William R. O'Connor, Joseph Kelly, James L. McGuire, Michael J. Hines, Joseph Palmer and John McCue.

New Contract Rules In Effect Tuesday

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—New rules for contract bridge will be disclosed and take effect Monday, instead of Tuesday as first announced.

A statement today by Charles M. Schwab, president of the Whist Club of New York, said the new code would harmonize substantial differences existing in various countries. A committee representing all leading American bridge organizations has indorsed the new rules.

Wellsville Worker Killed by Train

WELLSVILLE, O., Oct. 29.—Harry Workman, 28, pottery worker, was killed by a Pittsburgh-Cleveland passenger train here last night. Police said he stepped in the path of the passenger train when confused by the approach of an eastbound freight.

CAR-AUTO CRASH INJURES GIRL

Suffering a face laceration and bruises when an automobile in which she was a passenger and a street car collided at West Liberty and Cape May avenues last night, Miss Louise Neill, 18, of 3215 Latonia avenue, Dormont, was in Mercy Hospital today.

Edward J. Metz, of 1248 Tennessee avenue, Dormont, the driver, uninjured, told police he was turning into a gasoline station when the accident occurred.

Struck by an automobile at Smithfield street and Boulevard of the Allies last night, G. Earl Shar, 34, of Millvale, was taken to Mercy Hospital. He suffered a fracture of the left leg.

WHARF PARKING HEARING SET

War Department engineers will hold a hearing in City Council chambers at 10 a. m. Tuesday to consider plans for construction of an automobile parking improvement on the Allegheny River wharf, between Stanwix and Ninth streets.

Advocates of a plan whereby George Vang, contractor, would spend $1,000,000 in constructing the parking grounds in return for a 15-year lease on the wharf will be represented. At the end of the lease period, the Vang rights would revert to the city. The plan was approved by a group of property and business interests of the lower downtown section at a meeting Tuesday.

Rochester 'Lucky Bucks' Party Visits Here

"Chief Lucky Bucks" and 246 Rochester residents invaded Pittsburgh today as guests of the Rochester (N. Y.) Journal and the Rochester American, both Hearst newspapers. They were winners of the "Lucky Buck" contest sponsored by the newspapers.

Arriving on a special Baltimore and Ohio train, they were escorted to the banquet hall in the Henry Hotel, where they had breakfast. After lunch in the hotel, they were taken to the Pitt Stadium in five buses to witness the Pitt-Notre Dame football game. After dinner, they will be the guests of the Loew's Penn Theater. The party will leave the city on the 10:30 p. m. special for their homes.

The visitors are being piloted by W. G. Broadbooks, promotion manager of the Hearst Rochester papers. The party also includes Rochester city officials and judges; guests of L. R. Blanchard, managing editor.

Opium Squad Catch

MRS. CATHERINE LILLY

Mrs. Lilly, North Dithridge street, whose arrest downtown by federal narcotic agents, who said she carried several packets of narcotics, was followed by a Chinatown raid, netting four prisoners, seven cans of drugs.

Two Women 'Sorority' Promoters Fined

Mrs. Edith Burns, 27, of Fort Wayne, Ind., and Mrs. Pauline Berry, 32, of Chicago, who said they were promoting a "humanitarian and social science sorority" at $30 a member were fined $25 each with the option of 30 days in jail today by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court.

They were arrested yesterday in the William Penn Hotel on complaint of Mrs. Hallie Andrews, 200 Gilboa street, Carrick, after the two are alleged to have tried to induce Mrs. Andrews' daughter, Emma, employed in a downtown store to join the sorority.

Dorothy Andrews, sister of Emma, testified she had called Mrs. Burns on the telephone, posing as Emma, and had been told:

"You had better come down. There are lots of wealthy men here with bundles of money and you will like them."

Mrs. Burns denied making such a statement over the telephone. She and Mrs. Berry had no permit to operate, police said. They were charged with violating a city ordinance.

CHURCHES TO CELEBRATE REFORMATION DAY HERE

CONGREGATIONS TO HOLD JOINT SERVICES

Reformation Day will be observed tomorrow by many Protestant, Lutheran, Evangelical and Reformed churches throughout the Pittsburgh district. TWO POLLS CONTRADICT CLAIMS MADE FOR HOOVER

GOV. ROOSEVELT SEEN HOLDING EARLY LEAD

By COLE E. MORGAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Measuring the country as a whole there was no change during the past week in the presidential campaign alignment.

This is attested by a comparative study of the nation-wide presidential polls of the Hearst newspapers and the Literary Digest.

Returns to date in the Hearst newspapers poll show Gov. Roosevelt has drawn 56 per cent and President Hoover 44 per cent of the postcard ballots received. The Digest poll, as published in this week's issue, credits Roosevelt with 60 per cent and Hoover 40 per cent of that publication's ballots.

A week ago, a comparison of the major party votes showed exactly the same percentages for each.

DISPUTE HOOVER CLAIMS

The effect of these stationary percentages is to indicate that in the face of the almost daily claims of the Republican campaign management that President Hoover is making effective inroads into Gov. Roosevelt's early-acquired advantage, these claims are not borne out by the flood of new ballots pouring into the two poll headquarters.

The fact that the Hearst newspapers poll each week has shown lower Roosevelt percentages than the Digest, while both show Roosevelt with a comfortable percentage advantage over Hoover, emphasizes the conservatism of the Hearst papers poll and that it does not overestimate Roosevelt's real strength.

FIGURES COMPARED

The tabulation that follows shows the comparative alignment of the 48 states as evidenced by returns published to date in two polls:

Asking $300,000

DOROTHY ROSENTHAL

Miss Rosenthal, Atlantic City dancer whose suit against the P. R. R. for $300,000 for train-wreck injuries she claimed disabled her, received a setback in Camden (N. J.) courts when the railroad showed a three-reel film of her doing an acrobatic dance. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

NOTABLES BACK ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—The Democratic National Committee today pointed out a "poll of the best brains" appearing in the November issue of the Forum magazine and showing Roosevelt in the lead.

The statement said Roosevelt received 16 votes, Thomas 10, Hoover 8 and Foster 3. It lists among the Roosevelt voters H. L. Mencken, Clarence Darrow, George N. Shuster, Struthers Burt and Sidney S. Lenz, the bridge expert.

Roger Babson and Will Durant were listed among the Hoover voters, while the statement gave Oswald Garrison Villard and Elmer Davis, among others, as Thomas voters.

AmbridgeMan Found Hanging to Tree

The body of Joseph Woytovich, 45, unemployed laborer, of 1034 Duss avenue, Ambridge, was found hanging to a tree near the Pennsylvania Railroad Station at Economy late yesterday, according to a Coroner's report.

Presidential Trend By States

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States. It also shows the majority that each candidate has in each state in which he is leading. In addition it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each state as compared with the last preceding report from the state. These state reports are usually a week apart. The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each state where he has improved his position as compared with the preceding report from that state.

POLITICS, FOOTBALL :-: Notre Dame Band Concert Tonight :-: RADIO PROGRAMS

Pat Harrison And Stimson On WCAE

Political personalities and issues continue to hold the radio spotlight tonight.

Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, speaking under the auspices of the Democratic National Committee, is heard in a half-hour address over WCAE tonight at 8 o'clock. Senator Harrison will speak from the ballroom of the William Penn hotel and will be introduced by J. L. Kaufman, manager of WCAE. An address by Alfred E. Smith from Buffalo is being broadcast over an independent hook-up of seven New York stations, including WBEN, Buffalo, and WHAM, Rochester, from 8:30 to 10 o'clock. "Big Bill" Edwards, former Princeton football star, delivers a Democratic appeal over WJAS at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Harrison

Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson speaks at 8:45 tonight from Washington in the interests of the Republican National Committee. The broadcast is scheduled over WCAE.

Winding up the political broadcasts, Simon Michelet, of Washington, president of the "National Get-Out-the-Vote Club," discusses the extent to which "vote slacking" takes place in the United States as compared to other countries when he appears as guest speaker on the Columbia Public Affairs Institute over WJAS from 10:15 to 10:45 p. m.

For the football fans: Pitt-Notre Dame at Pittsburgh, reported by Graham McNamee and Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, WCAE at 1:45; Pitt-Notre Dame, with Ted Husing at the microphone, WJAS at 1:45; Columbia-Cornell, with Bill Munday announcing, KDKA at 2:15.

Program Pointers

Microphones installed in the lobby of the Hotel William Penn pick up a concert by the University of Notre Dame Band for KDKA listeners tonight at 6:45. The band, composed of 80 students, is directed by Prof. Joseph Casasanta, composer of several of Notre Dame's most popular songs, including "Hike Notre Dame," "Down the Line," "When the Irish Backs Go Marching By" and "Notre Dame, Our Mother" . . . On the same station at 8 tonight, an address on "Taxation Without Realization," by S. Ferguson, president of the Hartford Electric Light Company, is heard under the auspices of the American Taxpayers' League.

Prof. Casasanta

Jack Denny's music at the fall opening of the Waldorf Astoria Empire Room in New York, one of the most fashionable gatherings of the winter season, is a highlight of the cigaret Dance Hour on WCAE tonight at 10. Alternating musically with Denny are Vincent Lopez, from Chicago, and the celebrated operetta stars, Evelyn Herbert and Robert Halliday.

'American Weekly' Review on WCAE

A preview of the numerous articles of interest published in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly magazine, which is distributed each Sunday with the Sun-Telegraph, is scheduled tonight at 7 on WCAE.

Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, assisting Graham McNamee at the microphone during the NBC-WEAF network broadcast of the Pitt-Notre Dame game at the Pitt Stadium heard locally through WCAE, omits his regular 2:30 news talk today. His 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m. and 6:30 broadcasts are heard as usual.

Listening In On Radio Gossip

For the first time since Lee Sims and Ilomay Bailey have been starring on NBC networks, the team is broken for a feature program when Lee inaugurates a new series of presentations with his own orchestra over NBC-WJZ, of which KDKA is the Pittsburgh outlet, tonight at 8:15 .... At a later date, Ilomay will be heard as soprano soloist supported by an orchestra ... Carmen Lomonaco has been commissioned to create the tunes for the new George White musical ... Kate Smith leaves Lake Placid, where she's been resting, today .... George Hall, the maestro, hurt in an automobile crash not long ago, is regaining the use of his injured arm by playing the violin.

Miss Allen

Jack Benny, Bing Crosby, Freddie Rich and Burns and Allen reside in the same Manhattan apartment house.

One of radio's better known voices is back on NBC networks after several months' absence ... Its owner is Alwyn Bach, winner of the diction medal in 1930.

Don Bestor, now playing over NBC nets, was one of the first orchestra leaders to be heard regularly by remote control ... He played from the Willows during the pioneering days of KDKA.

And now another radio satellite has joined the motion picture forces ... John S. Young, the announcer, recently signed to announce and act in a series of movie shorts.

Arthur Allen, of the Stebbins Boys sketches, sails Thursday for Havana and his first vacation in more than four years.

Fred Allen interviews himself with the following results: Born in 1894 for no reason in particular ... Parents were not wealthy—in fact "my teething ring was vulcanized in three places" ... Went on the stage because "my father couldn't pay the instalments on the cradle and I found myself on the boards" ... Knows enough about literature to "keep away from the bookies" ... Favorite sport, duelling—because "It saves time, requiring only a couple of seconds."

Ernest Hutcheson has his own piano at the Columbia studios ... It receives special care and is kept under lock and key.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.

How Men, Women Vote

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

If any of you have been skeptical about the fashionables' response to art, just glance over the list of lenders for that interesting exhibit to be held at Carnegie Institute November 1 to December 15, an exhibit of International Exhibition paintings owned in Pittsburgh.

One of our social registerites, Mrs. James D. Hailman, some of whose paintings will be in this exhibit, owns quite an array of International paintings, which she has lent to the institute for the event.

She will have in the exhibit, in addition to some of her own work, paintings by Joseph R. Woodwell, Colin Gill, Peter Williams, Jose Gutierrez - Solana, Timoteo Prez-Rubio and Xavier Fuhr.

Lends Painting

Among those who've enjoyed certain pictures at past Internationals so well that they bought them, and who will exhibit them are Mrs. Henry R. Rea, Mrs. John W. Beatty, W. S. Stimmel, Mrs. George P. Bassett, Jr., Charles F. Patterson, Mrs. Joel W. Burdick, James R. Mellon, W. L. Mellon, Taylor Allderdice, E. W. Mudge, W. S. Arbuthnot, Mrs. George T. Heppenstall, Moorhead B. Holland, Mrs. Edward Houston Bindley.

Thruston Wright has lent a portrait of the late Mrs. Thruston Wright, painted by John W. Alexander and shown first in the International of 1913.

Mrs. John Crossan Cooper, Jr., is another connoisseur; Mrs. William N. Frew, William Frew, Samuel Harden Church, Mrs. Thomas H. Eddy, William S. Moorhead, George D. Edwards, Edward H. Flaccus, Henry W. Abbott, Alexander C. Robinson, George M. Laughlin, Jr., Mrs. B. F. Jones, Jr., Mrs. Robert Trimble, Jerome Hill, Mrs. Roy A. Hunt, Edward Pitcairn, T. J. Gillespie, Miss Eleanor McC. Chalfant and many others I haven't space to mention.

Sponsors of Art

Rolling Rock Club will be a lender, showing Frank W. Benson's "Wild Geese," from the 1923 International. The Pittsburgh Athletic Club will lend a group of former Internationals.

Mrs. Howard K. Jones has lent William Shulgold's "Belle," from the 1926 International.

Additional names on the list of tableholders for the Eye and Ear Hospital benefit, at the Hotel Schenley at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, include Mrs. Henry Rea, Mrs. Harmar Denny, Mrs. Carroll Fitzhugh, Mrs. T. H. Childs, Mrs. William B. Rodgers, Mrs. Elizabeth Taber, Mrs. Taylor Allderdice, Mrs. E. B. Scull, Mrs. Charles Lyon, Mrs. Joel W. Burdick, Mrs. Henry B. Rust and Mrs. Elizabeth Reif.

Reserve Tables

Also reserving tables are Mrs. Elizabeth Vankirk, Mrs. Louis Megran, Mrs. George Shaw, Mrs. Finlay Lloyd, Mrs. Louise P. Miller, Mrs. Thomas McGinley, Mrs. Charles Townsend, Mrs. Henry Lee Mason, Jr., Mrs. L. P. Nimick, Mrs. Joseph E. McConway, Mrs. Charles W. Brown, Mrs. W. Linford W. Smith and Mrs. B. K. Elliott.

Others include Mrs. D. G. Follansbee, Mrs. Charles Taylor, Mrs. William Walker, Mrs. B. B. Howell, Mrs. John Frazer, Mrs. George Edwards, Mrs. Mortimer Miller, Mrs. Edwin Rudd, Mrs. John Ricketson, Jr., Mrs. A. P. Burchfield, Mrs. James K. Bakewell, Mrs. C. E. Lott and Miss Jean McKelvy, Miss Isabella Chalfant, Miss Hester McEldowney, Miss Evelyn Swartz and Miss Margaret Phillips.

This morning in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Affolter, of Ramsey street, Wilkinsburg, Miss Helen Affolter and Edward Rouen, U. S. N., stationed at the aviation base, Great Lakes, Ill., were married by George Shields, in the presence of the families and a few close friends.

The bride was unattended and wore a gown of aster blue crepe, with a jacket to match, having puffed sleeves. Her bouquet was of roses.

There was a breakfast and reception after which Mr. Rouen and his bride motored to Chicago where they will reside.

Mrs. Kliachko to Teach New Jewish Music Group

Mrs. Sara Kliachko, a graduate of the Petrograd Conservatory, through lectures, drawings and piano numbers, will instruct the new music department of the Council of Jewish Women, the first meeting of which is to be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock in the home of the chairman, Mrs. Max Perlman, Squirrel Hill avenue. Mrs. Kliachko will begin with the earliest Chinese music, progressing through the music of ancient India, Arabia and Egypt.

WESTMINSTER ALUMNI TO MEET FRIDAY

The Pittsburgh Chapter of Westminster College Alumni Association will hold its fall party Friday evening, in the College Club of Pittsburgh. Dr. Robert Ferguson Galbreath, president of Westminster College, will bring greetings from the college. Motion pictures will be shown by Dr. Frank Bailey. A musical program will be given by Monas Harlan, Ellwood Rushworth and Paul McKnight.

Arrangements are in charge of these committees: Program, Dr. James Ferguson, president of the Pittsburgh chapter, and Mrs. R. C. McKelvey; publicity, Miss Minnie Belle McQuiston and the Rev. Joseph McCalmont; hospitality, Miss Laura B. Turner. The following will assist in the reception of guests: Mrs. Scott N. Watt, Mrs. T. P. Trimble, Mrs. H. H. Donaldson, Miss Ada Park, Mrs. Earl McKossoch, Mrs. Harold Lucas, Mrs. Louis Gerber, Mrs. C. L. McKee, Mrs. Frank Bailey, Robert Ferguson, R. C. McKelvey, J. E. Nelson, W. Bruce McCrory.

GLOSSY AND SUPPLE VELVETS AND HOW THEY MAY BE USED

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 29. — Of the hundreds — literally hundreds — of new kinds of velvets, the majority can be divided into two classes: the glossy and the dull. Both are worn for daytime and for evening; both appear in bright colors as well as in black, and both are used for both tailored and novelty types of clothes.

* * *

IF ANY distinction can be made between the two, it is this—that the shiny velvets seem more appropriate for dresses and other garments for indoor wear, and the matt velvets take their place in coats, wraps, suits — outdoor garments.

* * *

IN TODAY'S sketches are two new costumes from Maggy-Rouff that illustrates this general tendency, as well as several other features of this year's fashions.

* * *

THE DRESS, named "Caiffa," is of glossy velvet in a rich Moroccan brown tone. The skirt falls, on bias lines, smoothly over the hips to ample fullness at the hem. The cut of the blouse, and its fastening marks two distinct waistlines—one at the normal waist and another noticeably higher. The full sleeves have three bands of the fabric "worked" in such a way as to give the effect of embroidery.

* * *

THE COAT, in matt black velvet, follows much more tailored lines, and outlines the figure by means of semi-circular incrustations above and below the waistline. The same type of incrustations are used to get added fullness in the lower half of the sleeves. The columinous collar is of zibeline.

Crittenton Home Drive To Be Held Dec. 5 to 9

Instead of the donation day which has heretofore been held annually at the home, Florence Crittenton Home will have an intensive drive for financial assistance from December 5 to 9.

Dance, Card Party Of K. of C. Tonight

A Halloween dance and card party will be held tonight by Chartiers Council, Knights of Columbus, in their council house in Crafton. Arthur McFarlin is general chairman, and Thomas J. Brynes chairman for cards.

Le Gallienne Play To Be Reviewed Before Club

In addition to his discussion of the Spanish playwright, Jacinto Benavente, on Tuesday night before the Wheaton Club, Elmer Kenyon will review Eva LeGallienne's play of last season, "Saturday Night." This lecture will be the last but one in the series which Mr. Kenyon has given in the College Club under auspices of local Wheaton members.

On Tuesday, the 8th, he will discuss Italy's outstanding playwright, Luigi Pirandello.

Hostesses Announced For Benefit Card Party

Mrs. J. J. Monks, Mrs. Stephen J. Collins, Mrs. Michael A. Walsh, Mrs. E. C. Moore, Mrs. John F. Campbell and Miss Florence and Miss Marie Victory will be hostesses for the card party to be held in the Sacred Heart Guild Hall, Center avenue, Tuesday evening, for the benefit of the poor.

Bridge, "500," euchre, old maid and bingo will be played, and there will be prizes.

Mrs. McNeilly Hostess For Forum Wednesday

The Forum's monthly card party, which is set for Wednesday afternoon, will take place in Mrs. W. M. McNeilly's home, East End avenue. On the committee are Mrs. Robert McConnell, Mrs. J. H. Diamond, Mrs. W. J. Mahood, Mrs. Charles Adams, Mrs. L. A. Ford and Mrs. M. C. Kuhns.

Aspinwall Club Women Facing Busy November

Beginning on the very first day of the month with the literature and arts luncheon, the Aspinwall Woman's Club goes into a busy November. Modern short stories are to be studied that afternoon following luncheon. The music department will begin rehearsals for the Christmas music and play at its meeting on Wednesday night and work will be continued on the welfare layette at the sewing meeting of the home economics department, November 7.

Theater talks and biographies of English playwrights will make up the study material for the drama department on the ninth. An executive board meeting is called for the fourteenth, which is also the date for the evening department's meeting at which a Thanksgiving play is to be presented.

Two one-act plays will feature the general club meeting on the seventeenth and members of the home economics department will take advance orders for the articles at the bake sale to be conducted that day. November's concluding event will be the educational luncheon, one feature of which will be "poems of childhood" to which each member will contribute. On Saturday evenings, November 12 and 26, the clubhouse will be open to the young people of the community for dancing.

Federation's Publicity Program on Monday To Be Crowded

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

One wonders just how Mrs. E. L. Thomssen, district chairman of publicity, will carry out her extraordinarily full program at the State Federation publicity conference in Utility Hall on Monday.

With Mrs. Thomssen in charge of the program, and Mrs. H. J. Fax and Mrs. R. R. Rohrer, as joint chairmen for the day, the principal speakers will be Mrs. Elmer E. Melick, of Swarthmore, state chairman of publicity; Mrs. John M. Philips, first vice president of the Federation and Mrs. J. G. Chalfant, the district president.

The club editors of the daily newspapers have been assigned specific topics as have a number of press chairmen from individual clubs, among the latter being Mrs. Ronald L. Thompson, of Dormont New Century Club; Mrs. Elsie Breese Mitchell, of the Tuesday Musical Club; Mrs. D. Edwin Miller, of the Allegheny County Federation; Mrs. Charles Raizenstein, of the Rodef Shalom Sisterhood; Mrs. John T. Anderson, of the Carrick Mothers' Club, and Miss Dorothy Naumann, of Central Branch, Young Women's Christian Association. Mrs. Charles Goldwaite, president of the Mt. Lebanon Woman's Club, is to sum up the conference.

Mayfair Turns Out to Hear Symphony

Music lovers who attended the Boston Symphony's concert last night in Syria Mosque, the first symphony to appear this season, had an evening's reprieve from the realities of 1932 living. And nobody who was at the concert could go away saying Pittsburgh does not appreciate music.

The boxes were filled with such staunch supporters of music as slight, dignified Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., of Sewickley Heights, who is president of the Symphony Association.

Mrs. W. Edgar Reed and Mrs. E. V. Babcock, familiar figures at concerts, arrived together, and Mrs. F. C. Irish, looking regal in black velvet, was there, as were Mrs. Robert Lee Wilson, Mrs. George Pearson, Mrs. John W. Lawrence, in black satin; Mrs. John E. Nelson and her young daughter, Peggy.

Petite Gretchen Bickford, in snapdragon pink lace, arrived with David McCargo, and Elizabeth and Clara Dorothea Jenkins with their mother, Mrs. T. Clifton Jenkins. Elizabeth wore an interesting gown of flax blue crepe having scarf drapery of the same material over the shoulders and criss-cross straps of the crepe, outlined in sequins, to distinguish the deep black decolletage.

Betty Higgins' dress was striking. It was of sapphire blue bagheera with the V decolletage boasting a narrow bertha of the same material.

Emily Stuart wore blue bagheera fastened at the shoulders with rhinestone clips. Dorothy Jarvis was in wine-red velvet having a brief jacket of the same material with the sleeves outlined in bands of white fur.

Mrs. George P. Bassett, Jr., chose wine-red satin. Katharine Frazer, black velvet with a white ermine jacket. Mrs. James McKay was there. Mrs. James M. Graham, Jr., Mrs. W. Terrell Johnston and Mrs. Mortimer Miller in black velvet and chinchilla and Mrs. Roy A. Hunt.

Mrs. J. Hartwell Hillman arrived with her daughter, Juliet Hillman. Mrs. Edward B. Lee was in the audience.

TELL IT TO SALLY

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By SALLY MARTIN

Act Grown-Up and You Will Be Treated Accordingly

She's 20 years old, yet uncle and aunty ride herd on her—and she let's 'em!

They won't let her go places, even with a girl friend. They won't let her have company. And as for marrying—well, if she marries Bill they "never want to see her again."

So what's a poor gal to do?

"Dear Sally Martin:

"Please help me. I am in an awful fix and I haven't anyone but you to ask for advice.

"I am a girl 20 years old, and live with my aunt and uncle. They are awfully good to me and love me a great deal, but they keep me tied down all the time.

"I am not allowed to go out anywhere, not even with a girl friend, and they don't like me to have company, either. I just can't call my soul my own, and it makes me terribly unhappy.

"But here is where the real problem comes in. Please help me with it, won't you:

"About a year ago I met a very nice young man who is 32. We have learned to love each other, and he has asked my folks if he could marry me.

"They say 'No'—that he is too old for me, and that I could 'do better' than to marry him.

"But I just can't accept their say-so. I love him, and I think we could be very happy together. He is a very fine young man. He is wonderful to me, and is liked by other people. I feel that he is the only one I could ever be really happy with.

IS DISCOURAGED

"But my folks tell me that if I marry him they never want to see me again, and that just breaks my heart, because they have been good to me, and I love them.

"He thinks they shouldn't be so strict with me; but he is very patient, and he is waiting for me.

"Please tell me what you would do if you were in my place. I do love Bill, and I want to marry him. I am so discouraged I don't know which way to turn. What shall I do?

"ALLIE."

Learn to stand on your own feet, youngster! Learn to decide your life for yourself. You're plenty old enough to do it—and if you can't, you're a mighty poor bet as a wife for any man.

As a matter of fact, Uncle and Aunty are probably bossing your life because they think you haven't enough backbone to boss it yourself; and you're certainly furnishing them with plenty of evidence to support that hunch. So if you want to be treated like a grown-up human being, act like one.

DECIDE FOR SELF

If you wish to marry Bill, and you're sure Bill is a fine man, then go ahead and marry him.

You don't have to have anybody's "consent." Of course, the folks may put on a riot, but they'll get over it; and when they see you happy and contented in your own home, I'm gambling they'll end up by being proud of you.

Just now they probably think that they "know best" what's good for you. But they're mistaken. They don't. They can't live your life for you. They have no right to try.

Your life is up to you. It is up to you, even if you make mistakes. You have to grow your own backbone and cut your own wisdom teeth.

So stop sniffling and get some spunk. Don't quarrel with them, but tell them quietly but firmly, that you're a woman now, and have a right to live as a woman, not as a child. Tell them that you love them and appreciate all they have done for you, but that now you'll have to decide things for yourself. Then go quietly ahead and marry the man you love.

'I KNOW A DISCONTENTED LADY!'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

When Shakespeare said it, it was a "gentleman," and of humble means. Mine is a lady, and of a lavish plenty. She yawns at the most delightful life. She scowls at the mere-est mishaps. She views with moods a diversity of interests and displays that would last a wiser woman two lifetimes. She says: "Such is life!" And, "Oh, the monotony of it!" And, "I don't know why it is, but I never seem to have anything at all!" The bemoanings that many other people have a RIGHT to make a discontented noise with!

When satin slippers from a master shoe-craft man tap their tips with the miseries, buried in the snowy hair of a polar bear skin, I think of the bare feet I saw this summer treading a busy way in fallen yellow grain. The feet belonged to just as pretty a face as Miserable Mimi's! A print dress, bare golden head, a black sateen apron, arms that worked like machinery. Farther away was another figure, a feminine one, in kerchief and rough skirt, raking rhythmically. Behind them the great wide country and dark mountains for a setting instead of a French room.

There ARE women in the world, Mimi, who help in the field. Did you know that? Women who have no beautiful things.

NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Appreciation and Manners

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

About three months ago my daughter's friend from out-of-town visited her for three days. When he left he said he had a nice time, and thanked me. I looked for a letter when he arrived home, but none came.

Last week he came again and stayed three days. On one afternoon they decided they would go out for dinner that evening. My daughter asked her brother and his girl friend to go with them, and at 6 o'clock they left and never said "Mother, would you like to go with us," but left me all alone. I thought it was the most ill-mannered thing I ever heard of. They are both college graduates. Daughter teaches in the town he lives in.

B.

The more I contemplate the attractive and unattractive qualities of people, the more I am convinced that one of the most attractive, one of the sweetest, one of the most devotion-compelling, is a sense of appreciation. Indeed, this sense seems to be at the root of most other attractive qualities. And, when we think it over, it is quite reasonable and logical that this should be so. Certainly, too, it is the foundation of good manners, because always good manners are based on thoughtfulness.

The sense of appreciation in this young man, and I fear in your daughter as well, seems to be dull, deadened by their utter thoughtlessness. Of course the young man who had been your guest for three days, should have written you a bread-and-butter letter, thanking you for your kindness and hospitality. Anyone of decent breeding does this, and at once.

And you are quite right too to label your daughter's not inviting you to go to dine with them as "most ill-mannered."

Now what to do about this? The only thing, of course, is to talk it over with your daughter and make her see how ungenerous it all is, how ungracious to you. Of course I needn't warn you that such a talk must be done with all the graciousness in the world. There mustn't be an atmosphere of carping, of fault-finding, but rather of a friendly wish-to-understand. Make it all as loving as you can, for, if you don't, you probably know all too well, with a daughter inclined to selfishness, that nothing will be gained or accomplished. The fact that both are college graduates makes not the least difference. This is a question of humanity, not of formal education. Colleges, unfortunately, don't stress manners. It's the hearts in people that make for manners!

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

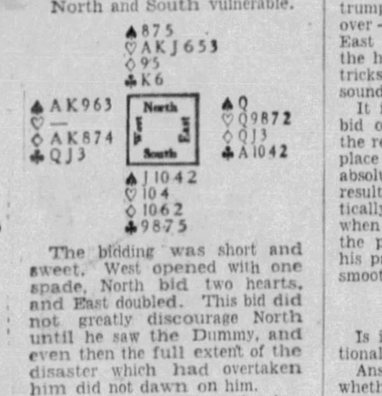
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Dangers of Vulnerable Overcalls

Everybody admits that the requirements for vulnerable Overcalls should be very high. It is impossible to put them so high that occasional severe losses will not be suffered, as otherwise many bidding opportunities would be lost. The higher the better, though, as is proved by the following hand where the unfortunate North made what he thought was a perfectly sound Overcall, only to suffer a set of 1,400 points, without there having been any possibility of saving a trick.

West—Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding was short and sweet. West opened with one spade, North bid two hearts, and East doubled. This bid did not greatly discourage North until he saw the Dummy, and even then the full extent of the disaster which had overtaken him did not dawn on him.

The Opening lead was the singleton spade Queen, after which East shifted to the Diamond Queen. The second diamond lead was taken by West, who now cashed the Ace-King of spades. On one of the spades East discarded his last diamond. West did not immediately give his partner the overruff, but instead led the club Queen, which was covered by the King. East won with the Ace and returned another club to West's Knave, whereupon West shifted to the diamond Ace. Declarer trumped, but was promptly over-trumped, and eventually East won another trick with the heart Queen, thus taking 9 tricks against North's perfectly sound Overcall.

It is impossible to criticize a bid of this kind, even though the result was so disastrous. To place the requirements at an absolute maximum would only result in a player being practically never able to overcall when vulnerable, in which case the path of the Declarer and his partner would be much too smooth.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

Today's Question:

Is it ethical to revoke intentionally?

Answer: No. Regardless of whether or not one is willing to pay the 2-trick penalty for a revoke, it is a form of cheating to make any intentional misplay. The penalties provided in the laws are designed to cover inadvertent mistakes, and no attempt is made to punish intentional errors. The only punishment for unethical practices is ostracism.

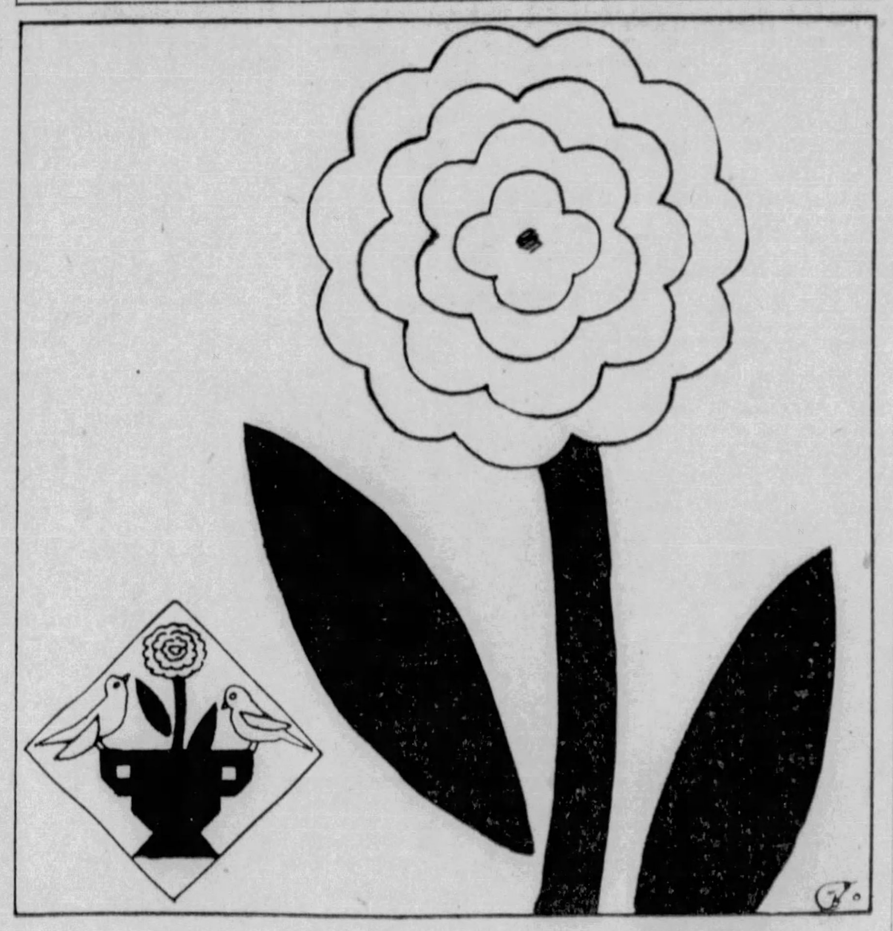
Nancy Page Quilt Club

By Florence La Ganke



Garden Bouquet Quilt -- Block 10 -- Zinnia

"I suppose that I should have kept the zinnia for the last flower since it comes last alphabetically, but I am so fond of the stocky, sturdy blossom that I had to put it in sooner. Zinnias always make me think of autumn luncheons with decorations in the warm, soft tones. There are the dull old yellows, the faded pinks, the sooty purples and lavenders and the burnt orange shades. As you can see I have suggested petals by scalloping the edge. And the gradation in color is made possible by the four sets of circles one on top of another."

"How should we applique those circles, Nancy? Should we have four complete circles with an upper layer always superimposed upon the lower, or shall we cut four scalloped discs?"

"You will find it easier to applique and keep in shape if you cut the four circles and then lay one on top of another. Of course, that means that there will be four thicknesses of cloth at the center of the flower, but that is not serious."

The members had pieced the lower half of the diamond-shaped block. It made the urn to which was seamed the upper triangle of white. On this was appliqued the zinnia with its stem and leaves and the two birds. Some of the members appliqued the birds ahead of the appearance of the flower. They had spare time and could do it easily. These women usually used the same material for all the birds. But those who changed the coloring of the birds to match or contrast with the coloring of the flowers waited until the new pattern appeared.

In every case the urns were all made of the same colored material. This gave a repetition in the quilt which made for beauty. The pattern as given in today's paper was cut, along with its accompanying directions, from paper.

Then a light tracing of the design was made on the white triangle. This helped to place the pieces correctly when they were ready for applique. Next a tracing of design was made on lightweight cardboard. This was cut into its pieces and laid on the color fast material which is used for the pattern. The zinnia petals were made darker toward the outside. That is, four shades of the color chosen were used. Plain color is better for this flower than a figured pattern material. In cutting the pieces of cloth a quarter-inch allowance was made on all sides for turning under of raw edges. These were turned, basted and pressed. Then they were laid in place on the traced outline on the triangle, and the pieces pinned in place. They were appliqued with slanting, invisible hemming stitch.

Sometimes Nancy advised making the flower stem a little longer than shown here. This raised the flower above the birds' heads. Because of the limitation of size in the paper it is impossible to make the stem quite as long as Nancy would like to see. Bias tape is used for stems.

The members were so enthusiastic about the zinnia they wanted to make another too, but Nancy said no. She promised them a phlox for the next flower.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Meat Hurt the Kidneys? Not If They Are Normal

Much has been accomplished in the prevention and treatment of diseases of the kidneys. Formerly little was known concerning this vital organ, but our knowledge has grown with new methods of diagnosis and the use of modern surgery.

Dr. Copeland

Perhaps you do not know that though we normally have two kidneys, we can live to a ripe old age with one kidney, or, in fact, that many babies are born with only one kidney. Believe it or not, persons with three or four kidneys also have been known to live without discomfort, and in most instances unaware of their curious state. Such cases are rare, of course.

The kidneys are located in the abdominal cavity, one on each side. Contrary to a common belief they are not low in the back, but high up.

The kidneys are supplied to purify the body. They remove poisons and waste materials that are included in the food. In the process of digestion, the nutritive elements of good are carried by the blood to the various organs and tissues of the body, while the undesirable elements are carried to the kidneys, which rid the body of poisonous and unsuitable substances by excreting them in the urine.

The skin and lungs help the kidneys in this purifying action of the body. Sweat glands in the skin carry away harmful substances dissolved in the sweat. On warm days when sweating is excessive the kidneys secrete less urine, but when the weather is cool and there is less perspiration more urine is voided, the kidneys being called upon to do more work.

The lungs exhale carbon dioxide, a waste substance of no value to the body, and this function aids the kidneys in the work of eliminating poisons and waste.

Under normal conditions an adult passes from the kidneys from one to one and a half quarts of fluid daily, the amount being influenced by weather, weight occupation, diet and the quantity of liquids consumed.

It used to be believed that the consumption of meat is injurious to the kidneys. The proteins in meat were believed to be harmful. Recent investigations indicate, however, that proteins do not irritate the kidney. Unless the kidney is really damaged or diseased it is not necessary to omit meat from the diet, although it should never be taken in excessive amounts, any more than other foods should be consume intemperately.

We can help the kidneys and conserve their strength and usefulness by keeping the skin clear and clean, so that it may do its share of the work. Daily bathing and drinking plenty of water aid in diluting the poisons that naturally accumulate within the body. The diet should be varied, simple and wholesome. Avoid fried or other greasy food and excessive quantities of salts, spices and condiments.

Share Children's Dreams

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

All summer John had begged dad to take him on a fishing trip, but business or engagements with grown men had interfered.

Then one day John and two other boys got a thrilling idea. They'd build a house in a crotch of the big locust tree in the back yard. They talked quickly, enthusiastically, breathlessly about it, and parted with the strict injunction to be on hand early next morning. At dinner that night, John's eyes were full of dreams.

Just as the boards had been collected and nails rattled in tin cans next morning, dad barged home with the news that today he'd take John and they'd go on the long-deferred fishing trip.

Dad was amazed and indignant when John said: "Aw, I guess I won't go, dad." "Why not?" "Well, we've planned to build us a clubhouse up in the big tree."

And curtly turning on his heel, dad stormed in, to deluge mother with remarks that they had bred an ungrateful, changeable man-child. Dad couldn't understand why, after wanting for three months to go fishing, his son had flatly turned down the offer when it came.

But when did it come? At a time when all the son's waking thoughts, all his being had been set in motion on a different project.

I think we seldom realize how thoroughly a child sets up this mental and physical motion toward an outlined activity, because we don't so thoroughly project ourselves into coming events. We've been disappointed too often, dissuaded too often, prevented too often, to let ourselves get hurt by dreams that are too vivid, plans that are regarded too surely as absolute certainties. But a child doesn't yet know how to protect himself this way. When he plans, he knows it is going to happen, and every fibre of his being starts moving toward that knowledge.

Therefore children aren't as adaptable as adults, and we should try, at least, to let them carry out their plans, telling them as far ahead as we humanly can if that is to be impossible.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

A nice rest is helped by wearing a charming nightie. A lovely model, on princess lines, is of salmon pink crepe georgette combined with matching crepe satin, the latter used for a shoulder ruffle that follows a V neckline. There is a matching jacket.

The tonic of the tunic has brought new life to the evening frock silhouette. A frock of heavy chalk white crepe has a long box-pleated tunic that follows the form-fitting line of the dress. The empire waistline is marked by bands of black broadtails extending from revers of the fur.

BETTER SELLING URGED TO CURE STEEL LAGGING

The steel industry constitutes an example of inefficient distribution and its salvation is to be found in scientific research and merchandising, John H. Van Deventer, editor of the Iron Age, declared before a dinner of the Metallurgical Advisory Board to the Carnegie Institute of Technology, at the Hotel Schenley last night. In summing up his estimate of steel business methods Mr. Van Deventer said:

"It has not sold itself or its products properly to its customers or the public. It has seen other industries—some of them competing ones, some of them older and some of them younger—run rings around it in promotional work as well as in market analysis and coverage."

3 AGES OF INDUSTRY

American industries were declared to have three successive phases. First is the phase of infancy in which the industry creeps. Next comes the phase of expansion in which it runs. The third phase is one of stabilization or saturation in which it walks.

Mr. Van Deventer declared the steel industry stopped running and began to walk as long ago as 1918. He asserted this is shown by plotting the five-year averages of production of ingots in terms of consumption per capita since 1880. He said:

"The salvation of the steel industry is for it to become distribution-minded. This is also true of the metal-working and machinery building industries, which resell metal in their products. Not only distribution-minded in its sales activities, but in finance, production and research as well. Particularly, perhaps, is there need of this in the finance department which we find nowadays to be full, not of 'yes' men, but of 'no' men!

URGES COUNTER FORCE

"It requires distribution-mindedness to undertake creative merchandizing. And the extension of creative merchandizing, with its relatives of product research, market analysis, breakdown of sales costs, lowering of sales resistance by the determination of technical supremacy areas, effective and intelligently selected and directed promotion, will form, perhaps, the strongest counter force that the steel industry can set up against the downward pressure on the volume curve."

He declared that if steel is at last awake, its future opportunities may be even brighter than its performance of pre-depression days. Under the powerful influence of organization, co-operation and determination, and with its mind attuned to scientific distribution, this great basic industry may shake off the shackles of tradition and arrive at the promised land of profits, he said.

Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology, presided at the dinner.

$200,000 FIRE LEVELS STORE

SHEFFIELD, Pa., Oct. 29.—(INS.)—Threatening the entire business section, fire today destroyed the Metzger-Wright department store, one of the largest in Northwestern Pennsylvania, at a loss of approximately $200,000.

Believed to have been started from defective wiring in a section of the two-story frame structure, which was being repaired, the blaze swept through the store with great rapidity. A hundred firemen from nearby communities battled the flames, but succeeded only in preventing them from wiping out the entire business section.

Only a portion of the walls, enclosing an area of half a block, stood this morning as firefighters brought the flames under control.

Volant Hero Among 33 to Get Medals

Thirty-three medals for heroism—five posthumous—were awarded by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission today at its fall meeting here. One of the medals was given to a Pennsylvanian and another to a resident of West Virginia.

A silver medal was given to George W. Masters, of Volant, Pa., who risked his life aiding in the capture of an armed maniac. The West Virginia hero was Glen M. Cater, 19, of MacAlpin, who rescued a 9-year-old child from death beneath the wheels of a locomotive.

Uphold Conviction In Molla's Injury

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 29.—(INS.)—Conviction and sentence of Francis J. Ward, of St. Paul, to 30 days in the New York City jail for driving his car while intoxicated was affirmed by the Court of Appeals.

The car, driven by Ward, crashed into a taxi in which Molla Mallory, former amateur tennis champion, was riding and slightly injured her. Ward carried his fight all the way to the state's highest court to escape jail sentence.

Dravosburg Chief Injured in Crash

Police Chief C. A. Livingston, of Dravosburg, was recovering today from injuries received when his motorcycle collided with an automobile while he was chasing an alleged reckless driver in McClure avenue, Dravosburg, last night.

Chief Livingston suffered a sprained knee and lacerations when he was thrown from his machine after it sideswiped the automobile of John Sellges.

Filmland Calls Injured Grid Star

HOLLWOOD, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Jungle paths of movie land may supplant the hazard of the football field for Orville Mohler, University of Southern California quarterback, forced from the gridiron by a spinal injury. Officials of a movie studio today said he had agreed to a test for the leading role in a jungle picture starring Frances Dee.

Lowell Thomas Here, Takes Plane to West

Lowell Thomas, news gleaner for the radio, was in Pittsburgh a short time today. He came in from New York by train and took a plane at Bettis Field for Columbus, O., where he was scheduled to make an address before taking another plane for Ann Arbor to attend the football game between Michigan and Princeton.

Preliminary Dry Injunction Granted

A preliminary injunction, pending final hearing December 13, was granted in Federal Court against a store and other rooms, first floor, 1401 Penn avenue, on a complaint filed by the prohibition authorities, charging dry law violations. Tony Delly was named as the proprietor.

TAX ON SALES URGED AS AID TO FARMER

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—C. B. Denman, livestock developer from Southern Missouri and acting chairman of the Federal Farm Board, told me that adoption of a federal manufacturers' sales tax, which he believes should be partially re-allocated among the several states, would constitute an effective instrument for farm relief.

Mr. Rukeyser

As a dirt farmer, Denman knows that

STOCKS HIGHER IN QUIET TRADING

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Stocks edged their way forward toward the end of the first half hour of trading today, with gains mostly confined to fractions.

The market presented its usual quiet Saturday appearance, trading apparently being mainly of professional nature. Johns Manville and Consolidated Gas each gained 1 and advances of about a point were made by Allied Chemical, American Smelting, Kennecott, American Tobacco "B," American Telephone, Case, Harvester, American Water Works and North American.

United States Steel, American Can, General Electric, United Aircraft, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and New York Central were slightly higher.

In the absence of any special overnight developments, Wall street again turned its attention to incoming earning statements of the railroads for September, which showed an average decline of only 7.2 per cent under the September, 1931, figures in net operating income. More than 30 roads, to date, were shown to have exceeded the previous year's figure in their September earnings of this year.

The steadier tone of commodities in recent trading was favorably commented upon in Wall street. Considerable conjecture was still apparent over a sharp rally in silver futures prices.

The British pound sterling continued its rally, gaining 9-16 cent at the opening to $3.28 9-16 for London cables. The French franc was ¼ point lower.

CUBAN SUGAR QUOTA SET

HAVANA, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—The Cuban National Sugar Institute has decided to stick to its recommendation to President Machado that the 1933 production be limited to 2,000,000 tons.

The institute set February 1 for the beginning of grinding and stipulated that it be completed not later than May 31. Previously January 15 had been selected for the starting date.

The quota for export to the United States was set for 1,114,991 tons; for export to other countries, 735,009 tons, and for domestic consumption, 150,000 tons.

President Machado must sign a decree fixing the size of the 1933 crop before November 10. It has been announced that he will not do so until after Tuesday's elections, in which half the House of Representatives will be renewed and local and provincial officials throughout the island will be selected.

National Will Earn Over 75 Cents A Share

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

NATIONAL STEEL Corporation is expected to earn more than 75 cents a share for 1932. The organization will be the only major steel producer to come to the end of the year with a profit.

This estimate of earnings has been made by Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the board. The expected profits will cover dividend payments of 75 cents a share made on the capital stock this year. The stock at present is on an annual dividend basis of 50 cents a share.

The official forecast of earnings for the year indicates that Mr. Weir anticipates better results from the final three months of the year than were reported for the third quarter.

Earn 60.7 Cents In Nine Months

IN THE FIRST nine months of this year National earned 60.7 cents a share. Profit for the third quarter was equivalent to seven cents a share. In order to come up to the estimate of 75 cents a share for the full year, National will have to earn about 15 cents a share in the final quarter of the year. This would be more than twice the earnings of the third quarter.

In making his official estimate of earnings Mr. Weir said:

"On the basis of results during the fourth quarter to date and business now on our books, we anticipate that the company's net earnings for 1932 will exceed the year's dividend requirements of 75 cents a share."

Earnings for the quarter ended September 30 of $155,075, or 7 cents a share on 2,155,832 shares of capital stock showed a relatively small decline from the corresponding 1931 quarter when 15 cents a share was reported. In view of the sharp decline in steel mill activity during the year, such results must be interpreted as a favorable, rather than an unfavorable, indication so far as management is concerned.

Fixed Charges Well Covered

GROSS PROFITS before charges for the first nine months of the year amounted to $5,531,006. Allowance for depreciation and depletion was $2,391,981. This was $136,868 more than the allowance for these charges in the corresponding 1931 period. Interest on funded debt was $1,604,148.

Fixed charges for the third quarter were earned 1.3 times and for the nine months they were earned 1.95 times.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

There's a Difference

Tony Wons forwards what he considers an "expressive thought," which he eavesdropped. The man was old, says Tony, about 70, and he said:

"I've been out of work for nine months, and I don't eat regular, but I'd rather have people say: 'There he goes' than 'Here He Lies'!"

There he goes? Down or up?

Izzy Elinsonisms

I shudder when I think of the new underworld method of taking a gangster for a ride wrapped in a burlap sack . . . Ugh! What a horrible death for a feller who loves to wear silk underwear . . . I wish that girl whoever she is, would hurry up and Say It Isn't So—so all those crooners will shut up!

Add Similes

Gene Cooney's:

"As grateful as Winchell certainly must be to Izzy Llinson!"

Thespian

The day his wife
Passed on he gave
The best performance
At her grave.
—Douglas B. Krantzor.

Nifties

In the David Murray manner: The big trouble with being a millionaire is that although they'll let you love 'em—they won't let you leave 'em . . . We know a town so small that the fire department has to play solitaire.

Premeditated Murder?

The Oct. 16 issue of a Cleveland ——day paper's "Sale Miscellaneous" ad column, contained this one:

"Will trade saxophone for good shotgun. 3588 W. 69."

The Second 'F' Is Silent

Paul Hambelberg writes that the column's word "phffft" has started a war at his house. It appears that no one over there is sure of the correct pronunciation. Paul pronounces it "fweet," which is wrong. It is, as we have so often pointed out, pronounced phffft!

At any rate, a friend argued with him about it and Paul said:

"It's as though you'd say 'Rogers Phffft.'"

"Oh," answered the friend, "I thought you meant like 'Athlete's Phffft!'"

One Man's Opinion

Take it from James Kevin Moloney, the best definition of a kiss goes this way—A kiss is a single man's pleasure and a married man's duty.

Tales of Hoffman

Master Irving Hoffman, whose theatrical drawings decorate this and that drama page, overheard two Broadway counterfeits panning a third.

"I heard him say," said the first, "that he always has his clothes cut by the best tailors."

"I know," was the other's stinger. "Wonder when he'll admit that he's always cut by the best people!"

Fact

One of the better known songpluggers along Broadway was the envy of his rivals for years because his wage finally ran up to $250 weekly, excluding expense coin. The plugger decided that he ought to go into the music publishing game himself, and resigned his swell job to open his own business. Things, however, have been so tough he can only take $50 a week for his labors and genius.

The other day his ex-boss encountered him.

"Well, sucker," said the former chief, "tell me something. How does it feel every Saturday to pay yourself exactly what you're worth?"

Arliss Picks His Next Film

By HARRISON CARROLL
(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29.

Liking all three stories Warners have lined up for him, George Arliss has had a hard time picking his next picture. However, he and Darryl Zanuck have finally decided upon "The King's Vacation," an original by Ernest Pascal.

When I tell you that the central character is a monarch who goes out incognito and has a swell time, you'll agree that the role is ideal to exploit the Arliss suavity and sense of humor.

While no one else is chosen for the picture as yet, Warners promise that the cast will contain more big names than in any previous Arliss film. Undoubtedly John Adolfi will continue to direct the English actor.

George Arliss

And, for a future note, you can write it down that "The Adopted Father" is scheduled to follow "The King's Vacation." There are no definite plans, as yet, for the Voltaire story that Paul Green is writing.

TOWN GOSSIP

Roscoe Ates pulled a neat gag upon the autograph seekers at the premiere of "A Bill of Divorcement." When they asked him to sign their books he passed over a slip of paper with his name written on one side and a gummed surface on the other. They could paste it right in. On this same occasion a pretty starlet—no, I won't tell you her name—showed up with a short speech all ready to read into the microphone. Not such a bad idea, either, but a sweller gag, I think, would have been to step up and read:

"I'm so glad to be here tonight, and I'm sure this is going to be a great picture."

The cable companies are going to be sorry to see Douglas Fairbanks come home. He and Mary Pickford send each other daily messages. And not that cryptic 10-word kind either. They write out whole sentences.

Anna Q. Nilsson

Wonder why nobody has ever signed Anna Q. Nilsson to make a screen comeback? All during her illness, the producers kept saying: "You just wait, Anna." But when she finally threw away the crutches, only one offer was forthcoming. And it was for a bit.

You don't really know Chinese food until you go on one of those Chinatown parties given by Anna May Wong. Being a very intelligent person, Anna also gets the right people together. One of her guests of honor recently was Moon Kwan, the Chinese poet.

Wedding bells rang last week for Jobyna Ralston's brother, Edward. His bride is Kay Ault. Another pair of honeymooners are Irving Thalberg's secretary, Vivian Newcom, and Kenneth Orlando Gjerset. They had a big wedding in Pasadena and half of the M. G. M. studio turned out for the occasion.

Harry Ruby is buying a series of letters from Ambrose Bierce to his daughter . . . Ralph Farnum airplanes it to New York soon.

BARNETT RIBS COPS

What a lot of satisfaction Vince Barnett must have felt in pulling that latest rib!

Some humorous-minded cop hired him to go to Santa Barbara and address the convention of the state motor-cycle patrolmen. Posing as a German police efficiency expert, Vince ripped into those ticket-givers in a fashion positively brutal. He said they were the shoddiest, the most insolent, the most badly organized group he had ever come across.

About this time things began to happen. Boos, thrown cushions and finally a concerted charge for the platform.

It took eight cops to ward them off until the rib could be explained.

Warner Film Registers As Hit

By EDWARD W. GOSS

William Powell and Kay Francis have turned in another successful picture, "One Way Passage," featured in the Warner.

As in many of their past pictures, Powell is cast as a criminal outlaw, and Miss Francis as his light-'o-love. The suave Powell is being brought back to the United States from Shanghai by a detective to hang for a murder. On board ship he and Miss Francis carry on a romance. She does not know her admirer is accompanied by a detective and he has good reasons not to tell her.

With such a situation, the film might have easily been butchered up into sundry pieces of mawkish sequences, but it isn't. A nice amount of restraint is cleverly used to make the thing thoroughly enjoyable. Moreover, the film is topped off with a particularly satisfying fadeout.

Appearing with Powell and Miss Francis are two Pittsburghers, Aline MacMahon and Frank McHugh. Miss MacMahon, portraying a confidence worker, is realistic. McHugh, a light-fingered lad who more than likes his spot of liquor, equals the excellent work of Miss Francis and Powell.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

For the first time in East Liberty, "Grand Hotel," film with all those stars, Greta Garbo, John Barrymore, et al., is on the Sheridan Square screen today to remain for an entire week.

* * *

In the Enright, from today through Tuesday, the screen feature will be "Blonde Venus," which has Marlene Dietrich as its star.

* * *

The Davis also changes its screen program today, with Ruth Chatterton, as the star of "Crash," heading the bill. George Brent is chief support.

* * *

The new burlesque in the Academy, from today on for a week, is "Step Lively Girls," which, as usual, will be given as a Sunday midnight show in the Penn avenue house.

* * *

Nixon patrons again will see a big new musical show before New York, when "Forward March" is presented there next week. It is the first prodiction of Brown & Henderson, well-known song writers. Smith and Dale will be the chief comics.

* * *

In the Pitt, beginning Monday, a comedy success of last season, never before presented here on the stage, "Blessed Event," will be the vehicle for the Edwin Vail Players, with Henry Richards in the leading role.

The Pitt football squad will be guests of the Edwin Vail Players at tonight's performance of "The Vinegar Tree" in the Pitt.

* * *

George Tyson, until recently advertising director for Warner theaters in the Pittsburgh district, has affiliated with the Fox Midwesco Theaters in Milwaukee. . . . Matt Moore, whose latest role is with Joan Crawford in "Rain," this week completed his twentieth year in the films . . . Eddie Cantor, having completed "The Kid From Spain" in Hollywood, lit out for New York . . . Constance Bennett and hubby, Marquis Henry De Falaise, are in New York . . . Dorothy Gish has returned from a trip across the pond . . . Rose Franken, author of the stage hit, "Another Language," has gone to London to rehearse a production of her play that will open mid-November with Edna Best and Herbert Marshall.

Doug Still Is Nimble As Crusoe

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Daniel Defoe's Robinson Crusoe had no Boy Scout training, so Douglas Fairbanks easily distances him in his new picture, "Mr. Robinson Crusoe," at the Penn Theater, in which he makes a bet that he will enjoy all the comforts of home on Tahiti or one of the Marquesas Islands. He swims ashore at once from his yacht, followed by his faithful dog, and the fun begins.

Mr. Seibel

It doesn't take Douglas long to establish a civilization. He teaches a parrot to say "Okay," trains a turtle to turn a waterwheel, gets a monkey to milk his goats, and makes another goat churn his butter by means of a treadmill, the dog scaring the goat by continual barks to keep it climbing.

There's a Man Friday, too, who comes ashore, but Doug cannot tame him with all his wrestling tricks, and he escapes to bring another horde of cannibals. But before they arrive Doug has acquired a Girl Saturday, whom he can teach anything but kissing—she prefers to rub noses.

When the cannibals return, Doug leads them a merry chase quite in his old form—he's as nimble as ever, and when in real danger scatters bananas to trip the foe. Landing on the yacht after an exciting escape, he finds the Girl Saturday ahead of him—and the last scenes show her making a great hit in Ziegfeld's Follies as a South Sea dancer.

It's a jolly burlesque, overflowing with animal spirits. There are beautiful glimpses of the South Sea islands, with a whole Hollywood zoo performing cute stunts. Children of all ages will love this picture.

Then there are Laurel and Hardy, very funny for two-thirds of "Scram," and a sporting film from the Salton Sea, and newsreels of Al Smith and Roosevelt—who are generously applauded by the audience.

Trio Engaged for Cable Picture

J. Farrell MacDonald, Hollywood's best-known "detective;" Walter Walker, who came to Hollywood 18 months ago to appear in a stage play and has been in pictures ever since, and Lillian Harmer, noted character actress, have been added to the cast of Paramount's "No Man of Her Own." They support Clark Gable and Miriam Hopkins, who are costarred in the production.

Mussolini in Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Ten years ago, Benito Mussolini and his handful of Fascisti followers, made their famous march on Rome. The anniversary is being appropriately celebrated in Italy, and in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News are spectacular pictures of the event. In the Piazza Venezia in Rome, 25,000 leaders hail their chief. Mussolini reviews them from a raised dias in the corner of the square.

Al Smith's speech at Newark in which he lines up for the Democratic standard bearer and Roosevelt's address in Baltimore are presented. The Happy Warrior electrifies a vast throng by lambasting the Republican administration for spreading the gospel of fear. In Baltimore Roosevelt declares for the immediate modification of the Volstead act and his mention of the word "beer" brings deafening applause.

From Ulster, Ireland, come thrilling pictures of the Europe's motorcycle champions racing at an 85-mile pace over wet roads.

Japan is training its high school girls to use machine guns and rifles. Exclusive pictures from Tokio show the Imperial Guard instructing the almond-eyed lassies.

Christmas, too, is just around the corner. A preview of American-made toys is given in New York by old Santa Claus to a crowd of children. The mechanical toys include old Popeye, the Sailor, who is shown punching the bag.

Beautiful pictures are presented of the famous old square-rigger "Coriolanus," which is about to start on a voyage from Boston to Africa. The ancient vessel, one of the very few of her type in existence, is shown at sea under full sail.

Hollywood on Parade

Karen Morley, whose real name is Mildred Linton, once paid plenty of money to a numerologist to work out a "lucky" name for her, and then discarded it because she thinks things like that are silly.

Clark Gable once became so despairing of making good as an actor when a company with which he was touring went stranded that he almost let a chance acquaintance talk him into joining up with him in the French Foreign Legion.

A fire department big enough to protect a city of 10,000 people is maintained at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

Lionel Barrymore drives himself around Hollywood in a flivver roadster with brightly nickeled trimmings.

Joan Crawford once swept out the rooms of a boarding school to earn enough money for tuition.

Norma Shearer was the original Firestone tire girl during the time she worked as an advertising model in New York City.

Boris Karloff is wearing a pair of plaster ears as part of his makeup for "The Mask of Fu Manchu" at M-G-M.

Sanders Inn Bills Dorothy Bushey

Dorothy Bushey, Pittsburgh entertainer, will be featured in the floor show tonight at the Sanders Inn Supper Club, where the management is presenting a new orchestra and new floor entertainment each Saturday night.

Show Boat

Jack Bruce and his dance band have been held over for another week in the Show Boat, night club.

Fulton Theater Is Host To Football Squads

The complete football squads of Notre Dame and Duquesne Universities, a party of close to 100, including graduate managers and coaches were guests of the Fulton Theater management last night to witness a screening of the hilarious football comedy, "Rackety Rax." Some of its scenes were taken at actual games between the country's leading universities, and many of the Notre Dame and Duquesne players recognized certain plays as the camera caught them. One exciting moment from a Carnegie Tech-Notre Dame game shows a thrilling run by Marchmont Schwartz, one of the greatest backs in Notre Dame history. The Notre Dame and Carnegie Tech bands are seen during the action.

New Show Is Offered As Plaza Bill

A new floor show is offered in the Plaza to continue through Halloween week. Jack Barry, Pittsburgh dancer, heads the bill, which includes four girls and the Java Boys. Etzi Covato's Orchestra is continued for the dinner and supper session.

BITS OF LIFE — All in a Day — By MARK HELLINGER

The Gentleman

PAUL Van Burnside stepped blithely down the steps of his father-in-law's Fifth avenue residence. He was faultlessly attired, and, had you been passing, you would have looked at him, too . . .

Funny thing about Paul. Twenty years before, he had stepped blithely down those same steps. Then, as now, he was faultlessly attired. And people stared. He looked the part of a wealthly gentleman then. And he did now, too.

But on that day so long ago, he had scowled as he descended those steps. He had a reason. A good reason. He had just come from asking millionaire Tyson for his daughter Elinor's hand. And millionaire Tyson had snorted and fumed and pounded his fist. And in the end he had said "No," most emphatically.

So Paul Van Burnside had scowled. He had held his fine head high in the air and set his sails for Rector's. Two hours later he emerged with all sails furled. He was gloriously, happily, arrogantly plastered. Which is one reason why the old timers call them the good old days . . .

But, where there's a will there's a way, as the old saying goes. Paul Van Burnside saw the fair Elinor in secret, and, before old millionaire Tyson could call out the reserves, the young people had eloped.

Headlines were rather rare in those days. But when millionaire Tyson disinherited his daughter, the newspapers made a nice little front page spread of the story. Tyson was quoted as saying that, despite the fact that young Van Burnside came from a prominent and wealthy family, he was a young scoundrel, a reprobate, and a drunkard.

All of which is quite difficult to live up to . . .

Love thrives on hardships, so they tell me. At any rate, Paul and Elinor breezed through the capitals of Europe like Twenty Grand in a field of truck horses. In other words, they were living.

But—and this is quite a but—the young Mr. and Mrs. Van Burnside suddenly found themselves short of spending money. So what was more natural than that they should cable old Van Burnside for a few bond coupons? And what could be less natural than that old man Van Burnside should cable back that the family fortune had suddenly become the family misfortune?

Paul managed to collect a few thousand as an inheritance from his maiden aunt, but that was soon gone. Then it was that they landed back in New York. And believe you me, the old town is far from friendly when the wallet is empty.

Give the boy credit for one thing. He didn't whine. And he didn't beg. He didn't go to millionaire Tyson and say:

"How much will you give if I return Elinor to you?"

Nope. The kid had what we sillies call honor. And Elinor was built along the same lines. They decided to rent a small flat somewhere, and look around for work.

Somehow, they stuck together in the lean years that followed. Their love never iced. Paul got a job as bookkeeper in a small downtown brokerage office. I'm not going to tell you that he worked himself up until he became head of the firm. Because he did nothing of the kind.

He worked hard, but he hated work. Wearily he went home each night to that little flat on the third floor rear and plopped himself down to a humble meal. It was quite a comedown for both of them. But no complaints were uttered.

They kept away from their old society friends. They cultivated no new ones. As far as Fifth avenue was concerned, the young Van Burnsides had died on the same day that the family fortune expired.

And that was their life for 19 long years. Then Elinor aged suddenly. Overnight she was old. Overnight she found that breathing could be very, very tiresome.

Paul was afraid that the neighborhood doctor didn't know his business any too well. He couldn't afford better, but there was still old millionaire Tyson. After all, he felt, this is no time for pride. A life is hanging in the balance.

But Elinor, as white as the pillow on which her head lay, said no.

"Don't do it, Paul," she whispered. "Don't do it. They didn't want us during the long struggle. We don't want them now. It wouldn't do any good anyway."

"Please don't say that," pleaded Paul. "You know that things aren't that bad. You'll be well again and up in a few days. You know you will. You must. I can't stand it—seeing you ill like this."

She smiled and held a finger against his lips.

"Be a good boy," she said. "There isn't much time left. And I don't want you to look so solemn. It's not becoming to you, Paul. And there's something I want you to do for me. Will you promise to do it?"

"Whatever it may be," he said, "I promise."

Her lower lip trembled.

"Keep away from my family. Keep away from them just so long as you haven't the appearance of a gentleman. When you can afford to enter that house dressed as you did the last time, then I want you to go. And I want you to tell them that I loved you to the end. And that I never regretted leaving them. And that you will never need their help. Will you do that—for me?"

Paul bowed his head . . .

Two weeks after that, Elinor died. Paul did his best for her. But his best wasn't much. What little money he had went out for a decent burial and a decent place for her to rest in quietude.

From that point onward, Paul had but one aim in life. He wanted to fulfill Elinor's wish, before it was too late. He wanted to walk into the fading Tyson mansion on Fifth avenue, and he wanted to look the part of a gentleman.

It sounds incredible that he could have accomplished it in one short year. It sounds almost like one of those things that could happen only in stories. Yet it happened. In real life.

Paul Van Burnside walked into that mansion only a week ago. His head was held high, and his eyes glistened as though from a cold. His shiny silk hat contrasted well with his graying hair. His clothes were impeccable. His malacca cane gave off flashes of black lightning as it swung to and fro. He disappeared inside.

Old Millionaire Tyson's eyes popped from his head. Paul Van Burnside removed his gloves meticulously and bridged the gap of 20 years in 20 minutes. He fulfilled the wishes of Elinor to the letter. Then he left . . .

* * *

Paul Van Burnside stepped blithely down the steps of his father-in-law's 5th Ave. residence. He was faultlessly attired, and, had you been passing, you would have looked at him, too. He walked two blocks. Then he turned to look back. No one followed. He stuck his hand in his pocket. Across his shirtfront, a sign lit up.

"Smoke El Habana Cigars," it read . . .

WILL ROGERS SAYS

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Had a fine trip in here from Florida, over the beautiful country of Florida, Georgia, South and North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, and New Jersey. Was going to stop in Washington, but the newspaper boys said there wasn't a soul there. Ain't Mr. Hoover here? "No, he has gone to save Indiana."

Will Rogers

Well, I know my old Injun friend Charley Curtis is here? "No, he is saving Kansas." Well, then I will just drop up and see some of the boys in the cabinet? "Why, none of the cabinet has been here since early in the spring."

Well, who is running the country? "Why, nobody. That's why things are kinder picking up."

Yours, WILL.

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Notre Dame Hit in 1933.
Six First-Stringers Go.
Another Tie for Scots.
Spinner Play Accident.
Rajah Sought by Braves.
Kapphan After Dempsey.

FIVE TO GRADUATE FROM IRISH LINE

WHEN NOTRE DAME comes back to Pittsburgh next year to play Carnegie Tech, the greater part of the mighty line presented against Pitt today will be missing. The Irish, parting with 10 players, will suffer their heaviest graduation losses among the forwards. The only first-string back to depart will be Quarterback Charley Jaskwhich, with Quarterback Emmett Murphy and Halfbacks Mike Koken and Joe Sheeketski going from the second team, but five of the seven forwards are playing their final season of college football. Six of the 11 so-called varsity (try to see any difference), therefore, will pass out.

Charley Jaskwhich

The men to be lost from the wall include both guards, Norman Greeney and Jim Harris; both ends, Capt. Paul Host and Ed Kosky, and one tackle, Joe Kurth. Bill Pierce, reserve guard, also will get his diploma. Only Ed Krause at left tackle and Ben Alexander or Kitty Gordon at center will remain of today's first line. Replacing so many brilliant stars would be a staggering contract for the average college, but will it bother the Irish? Not a bit. They'll probably come up with something even better.

TIE GAMES ARE becoming fashionable at Carnegie Tech. The 7-to-7 draw with Temple in Philadelphia last night was the third deadlock for the Skibos in their last six contests, counting the scoreless charity number with Duquesne at the close of the 1931 season. The W. & J. game two weeks ago ended 6 to 6.

The Scots haven't tasted victory in their last three contests, but a tie with Temple was creditable, all things considered. The Owls had beaten Thiel, West Virginia, Bucknell and Denver for a clean record this fall, and had pointed particularly for the Carnegie game. The Scots have not lost to Temple in three meetings.

EVER SINCE FORDHAM was knocked off by Michigan State last Saturday, New York fans have been raving about Bob Monnett, Michigan State back. They had never heard of him. Yet Middle Westerners will tell you he has been an unusual football player for three years.

In spite of his rare ability and a three-year record, Monnett was unknown in New York, and unsung until he had performed there. It bears out again the old contention of many football men that there are hundreds of great football players racing over the turf every Saturday afternoon who are far superior to some of those about whom you read and hear so much.

VARIOUS STORIES HAVE been told as to the origin of the spinner play, but according to Judge Walter P. Steffen, who perfected it as coach at Carnegie Tech, it was discovered by accident, and was first used by a fullback who employed it because it was the only course open to him. Before Carnegie's game with a certain opponent in 1924, Steffen recalls, Plaid scouts reported that the enemy, using the double wing-back formation, had a left wing-back who was a fine ball carrier and specialized on the reverse play. But they had discovered that by some movement of which he was not conscious, just before the snapback, he tipped off the play every time he was to carry the ball.

Judge Steffen

STEFFEN ASSIGNED HIS right end to watch for this tip-off and then cross over and spill the left wing-back. On the second play the Tartan terminal observed the telltale movement, and as soon as the ball was snapped he tore across the scrimmage line and bowled over the marked player.

The opposing fullback, taking the direct pass from center, was to hand the ball to the left wing-back, but when he looked across he discovered that that particular teammate was flat on the ground and out of the play. There was no one to whom the fullback could pass the ball, so he spun around and did what any back would do under similar circumstances—he carried it himself.

SLICING THROUGH THE line, he continued going. The defense had moved over to stop the reverse play, and the fullback found a wide path through which he galloped for 40 yards. The Carnegie coaches and players concluded that the foe had sprung a new play.

Nothing was said about it after the game, but the following Monday the Plaid coaches began to build plays in which the main feature was the spinning back. They incorporated spinner plays in their offense from that time on and their success prompted practically every other team to take them up. The fullback who introduced the play was entirely unconscious of the fact that he was giving football a new feature.

THOUGH BOSTON HAD one experience with Rogers Hornsby and a return engagement might not have made any great hit with the fans of that city, Burt Whitman is authority for the statement that Hornsby might have landed with the Braves again as a player if the Cardinals had not signed him. It is said the Brave management had seriously considered the Rajah as an addition to the Hub team for 1933, figuring on turning him into a first baseman with Baxter Jordan, who has played all infield positions, moving over to third.

BUT AT THAT, Boston men express the opinion that Hornsby's real sphere of usefulness would be as a scout. They admit he hasn't been so good at estimating the value of seasoned players, but contend that his judgment on the possibilities of youngsters has been uncanny, forgetting perhaps that he gave up Earl Grace to Pittsburgh in exchange for Ralston Hemsley.

In some circles the opinion prevails that if Hornsby doesn't make good as a regular in his attempted comeback with the Cards, he will be made manager of one of the Redbird farms.

UNEMPLOYMENT HAS HIT the hockey ranks, too. Manager Jack Adams has evidence of it in Detroit, where he figured that his only worry would be the picking of the best players from a squad of 35 for the Redwings and Olympics.

Jack Dempsey

But he has been kept busy turning away other applicants. Youngsters are showing up at camp in person to request tryouts, and discarded veterans are wiring for transportation. Adams says he could sign enough idle hockey players to make up an entire league.

IT MAY OR may not pan out, but there is a possibility that Jack Dempsey will be seen in a local ring before long in the role of referee. Negotiations are pending for his appearance here, with a fair chance of success. The promoter seeking Dempsey's services is Eddie Kapphan, who hopes to present the former heavyweight champion as third man in the ring at one of his coming shows at the Arena on the North Side. Dempsey plans a tour that will bring him close to this sector, and is said to look with favor on an offer made to him by Kapphan to handle a main bout here. An early decision is expected. The custom being to withhold the names of referees until the time comes for them to appear in the ring, it would be necessary for Kapphan to obtain permission from the State Athletic Commission to announce the appearance of Dempsey in advance of the show. But there is no doubt that this permission would be granted readily.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29.—Temple University's varsity football team remains among the undefeated of the East today, but the perfect record of the Owls was spoiled by a fighting Carnegie Tech eleven here last night, which fought the locals to a standstill to gain a 7-to-7 tie and come within an inch of recording a victory.

Had Carnegie won, it would have marked the third time in as many years that the Tartans had defeated the Cherry and White.

KAVEL BRIGHT STAR

Led by Co-Capt. George Kavel, brilliant right halfback, a back who always has been a thorn in the side of Temple teams, the Tartans made a brilliant comeback after their crushing defeat at the hands of Notre Dame last week. It was Tech's first night football game, but the players did not seem to mind the strange surroundings.

Early in the second quarter, Kaval broke away for a 35-yard run that carried the pigskin into Temple territory. Bevevino, subbing at quarterback for Stu Dueger, called for a pass, ruled complete by the officials on the Owls' 10-yard stripe when interference was charged against Temple. Kavel and Spisak alternated at lugging the ball until it was placed on the one-yard mark. A five-yard penalty was inflicted on the Tartans at this point for the backfield being in motion, but Spisak chased around right end for the score. Red Stewart booted a placement goal for the extra point.

Temple's aerial attack paved the way for its touchdown. After an 18-yard heave had put the ball on the Tech 10-yard mark, Lorne Johnson was sent in at left halfback for Zukas and in three plays he crashed over for the score. He kicked a placement for the tying point.

TECH MISSES CHANCE

Tech missed a great chance for victory in the third quarter. Bevevino hurled a 41-yard pass to Ostrosky that put the ball on the Temple 18-yard mark. Kavel bore the brunt of the attack to move the ball to the goal line, but he was stopped as he tried a dive over the center of the line for a touchdown.

Both teams compiled nine first downs. Tech's line play, with Co-captain Hooks Sample back in the action, was splendid. It was the second tie of the season for the Plaid, Wash-Jeff having been held to a 6-6 deadlock earlier in the campaign.

Geo. Washington Downs Hawkeyes

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—A fast, hard-running halfback, Nigs McCarver, last night took it upon himself to avenge last season's licking, and George Washington University defeated Iowa University, 21 to 6.

That was the story of a well-deserved victory. Unable to bottle up the George Washington sprinter in the first and fourth periods, the Hawkeyes saw three touchdowns rolled up against them before their own halfback, Law, galloped 65 yards for Iowa's only score.

KANSAS AHEAD

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Unleashing a powerhouse attack in the final quarter, the University of Kansas Jayhawkers scored a lone touchdown to defeat the St. Louis University Billikens, 6 to 0, here last night in a football game that avenged the Jayhawkers for two defeats a quarter of a century ago.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: A MALE RECORD—Sultan Mustapha III (1717-1774), whom Voltaire surnamed "that big porker, Mustapha," came to the throne at the age of 41, after spending 30 years in the confines of the harem. His first measure after he ascended the throne of Turkey was to cut the expense of his harem containing 3,000 concubine and slaves. The maximum allowance per annum was fixed at 250 livres per capita, equal to about $500 at the present day. His concubines bore him 582 sons in his lifetime, and among all this numerous progeny the Sultan in vain sighed all his life for a daughter.

TOMORROW: THE FESTIVAL OF 50 CENTURIES.

DISTRICT GRID CARD FULL

Some pretty rugged assignments face college varsities of the tri-state area today. A crackerjack outlay of games is on tap to support the Pitt-Notre Dame tussle, which, of course, really doesn't need any support.

Waynesburg's undefeated and untied Yellow Jackets are confronted by a formidable foe in Westminster as the Jackets attempt to keep their record unsullied. The game will be played in New Wilmington, where Titan elevens always are toughest to take. Westminster has built its defense to stop Rab Currie, star left halfback of the Jackets.

GENEVA MEETS TEST

Geneva invades West Virginia for a battle with the Thundering Herd of Marshall College. This game will test the Covenanters to the limit, with the outcome a tossup.

Bethany does not appear to have much of a chance with Grove City as the Bisons tackle the Crimson on their own lot. Slippery Rock and Clarion clash at Clarion and Indiana meets a tough one in Fairmont at Indiana.

Allegheny, still seeking a victory, takes on the Ithaca Training School eleven at Ithaca. West Virginia is up against another tough one in Marquette, the game being scheduled for Milwaukee. Davis-Elkins will have its hands full with the Quantico Marines at Quantico, Va.

The historic W. & J.-Lafayette series comes to an end, temporarily at least, as the Presidents invade Easton. Wash-Jeff looms as a slight favorite to crack down Herb McCracken's Leopards.

STATE FACES COLGATE

West Liberty, one of the tougher class B teams of the tri-state district, has an easy one in Wilmington College of Ohio.

Poor Penn State, kicked about by all opponents to date, hopes to hold the score down as it tackles Andy Kerr's powerhouse at Colgate.

Two 80-Yd. Runs For Scores Made In 31 Seconds

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Here's one for the football books:

Tech High kicked off to Carnahan, of Jefferson High, last night and he ran 80 yards for a touchdown. Jefferson kicked off to Farrar, of Tech, and he ran the ball back 82 yards for a touchdown, the two scoring plays requiring only 31 seconds by the timer's watch.

The final score was Jefferson 27; Tech 7.

LOCAL BATTLE HEADLINER

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—The severest test so far for the 1932 national championship ambitions of Notre Dame's high-scoring football machine, against the Pittsburgh Panther, features today's climax to a sensational but none too profitable October campaign on the college gridirons.

This game tops an intersectional slate in which the mid-West seems slated to enjoy a holiday against Eastern rivals, marks the year's first journey for Notre Dame's erstwhile Ramblers and promises to draw the biggest crowd of the day to Pitt Stadium —65,000.

The schedule appears relatively easy for most of the major teams so far neither beaten nor tied in the race for titular honors. Colgate and Holy Cross, in the East, should win rather handily, and Pennsylvania figures to whip the Navy.

It will be a different story for some of the others in the unbeaten ranks. Two of them are involved on the same field in the Brown-Harvard battle at Cambridge. Two others, Columbia and Cornell, appear certain to wage another closely-fought engagement for the benefit of a capacity turnout of 32,000 at Baker Field here.

Adolph Heuser Wins Over George Nichols

BOSTON, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—After being knocked down five times in the opening round, George Nichols, courageous Buffalo veteran, gave Adolph Heuser, promising German light-heavyweight, a furious 10-round battle last night at the Arena, but the Teuton's ox-like strength wore down his rival in the late rounds and he gained a unanimous decision. Heuser weighed 176½ and Nichols scaled 170.

Steve Halaiko, clever Buffalo lightweight, had a difficult task subduing the aggressive George Salvatore, of Oak Bluffs. Not until the fifth round did Steve find openings for the effective sharp shooting that piled up his winning points.

LOCALS ENTER BIG STRUGGLE UNDERDOGS

McNamee, nationally-famous announcer, and Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, will work together reporting the game over the NBC-Red network and through station WCAE locally. Ted Husing, Columbia System star, will be on hand, and his broadcast will be heard through station WJAS.

W. Don Harrison, Pitt's athletic director, has issued an earnest request that fans get to the game as early as possible, so as to avoid last-minute confusion.

Arrangements have been made by the police department to take care of the crowd with a lineup of 220 traffic officers, headed by Inspector Jacob Dorsey. Parking on Terrace, Lathrop, Robinson, DeSota, Fifth from Bellefield to Craft and Bouquet from O'Hara to Fifth will not be permitted, and only one-way parking on O'Hara from Bigelow boulevard to the stadium and on Buffalo and Aliquippa streets.

CONTEST ON AIR

Still the greatest show in college football, possessed of experience, speed and brawn, three great assets, the Notre Dame eleven that battles Pitt today is said to be the greatest in the school's history. And Notre Dame has cheered some powerful elevens in the past. They say this year's team blocks better, has greater all-'round strength and is faster and smarter than any machine that ever rumbled out of St. Joseph's valley in years gone by.

But the team so far has not been tested, first Haskell, then Drake and last week, Pittsburgh's own Carnegie Tech having been crushed under by the Notre Dame Juggernaught. It may be that today, facing its first really strong opponent, that the highly touted Ramblers will crack.

Pitt, on the other hand, after moving off to three easy and spectacular triumphs, over Ohio Northern, West Virginia and Duquesne, had a gruelling struggle on its hands before West Point's Cadets were beaten, 18-13, and an aroused and brilliant Ohio State varsity fought to a scoreless tie. If the battering received by the Panthers in these two encounters hasn't weakened the men to too great an extent, the taste of fire may stand the team in fine stead today.

Barring last-minute shifts in plans, the rival coaches, Dr. Sutherland, of Pitt, and Hunk Anderson, of Notre Dame, have their battle plans set.

Anderson announced yesterday, after his team's final tapering-off drill here in the Stadium, that he'd start his varsity lineup, composed of Kosky and Capt. Host, ends; Krause and Kurth, tackles; Harris and Greeney, guards, and Alexander, center, with Jaskwich at quarterback, Lukats and Brancheau, halves, and Melenkovich, fullback.

HELLER BIG HOPE

Pitt's answer to this array of strength will be the hurling into the fray of the varsity line and a shaken-up backfield. In place of Capt. Bulldog Reider at right halfback, Coach Sutherland has decided to start Mike Sebastian. At quarterback, in a surprise move, he'll use Miller Mungas, light sophomore back from Bellaire, who has been third stringing it all season. Weinstock will be the fullback, Hogan and Cutri will be held in reserve, Skladany and Dailey will go at the ends; Cuba and Walton at the tackles; Hartwig and Onder at the guards, and the veteran Joe Tormey at center.

The big hope of the Panthers today is founded on the brilliant Warren Heller, crack left halfback, the equal of any one man in the Notre Dame cast. Heller, rated at the head of the East's parade of all-America halfback prospects, has not failed to turn in a brilliant performance in each of the Pitt games this year. He's a fine defensive man, runs like a deer, can drive through the line and is an accurate passer. When Heller's pitchin' 'em, they all are "strikes."

It was his passing that beat the Army and his heaving that came near beating Ohio State . . . that should have beaten the Buckeyes.

Notre Dame has the greater reserve power. The shock troop backfield (there is little to choose between the first and second quartets) has Vejar at quarter, Koken and Sheeketski at the halves and hard-hitting Banas as a fullback.

SCHOLASTIC GRIDIRON TEAMS FACE HEAVY CARD TODAY

STRONG RIVALS RENEW OLD FEUDS

By JULIUS LEVIN

Filled with contests bringing together time-honored football rivals, the scholastic schedule offered high school fans today looms as one of the best of the season.

Only one class AA Conference duel is listed for disposal this afternoon, Washington meeting Turtle Creek Union at Turtle Creek, but despite the dearth of league encounters, Conference members will face some tough assignments.

NEW CASTLE AT ALTOONA

New Castle, one of the favorites to win the Double A crown, risks its string of unbroken victories in a battle with Altoona at Altoona. Greensburg will find Connellsville a stubborn foe at Connellsville, while Clairton will have its hands full with Jimmy Russell's Donora Dragons at Donora. Uniontown will be the McKeesport attraction.

Monessen plays at Monongahela in one of the Monongahela Valley headliners, while Tarentum plays at New Kensington. Wilkinsburg High, also a member of the Conference, is idle today.

The Beaver Valley schedule is featured by the Aliquippa-Ambridge and Beaver Falls-Butler engagements. Ambridge and Beaver Falls are staging a merry race for the class A championship of the W. P. I. A. L. and both must win today to stay in the fight.

Aliquippa always manages to play its best football when opposed to Ambridge and the two teams should present a thrilling duel for their followers. There is no love lost between the rival coaches, Moe Rubenstein, of Ambridge, and Nate Lippe, of Aliquippa, and this feeling adds to the attractiveness of the contest.

BUTLER FACES TEST

Butler High, eliminated last week from the class A fight, will be eager to make amends by checking the winning streak of Beaver Falls.

Other important scholastic tilts find Shady Side Academy opening its Tri-State Prep School League season by engaging University School, of Cleveland, at Shady Side; Beaver at New Brighton, Derry Borough at Derry Township, Ellwood City at Monaca, Midland at Rochester, Aspinwall at Verona, Vandergrift at Dubois, Oford City at Har-Brack, McDonald at Canonsburg, Hurst at Etna and Kittanning at Punxsutawney.

WESTINGHOUSE TAKES LEAD

Westinghouse took undisputed possession of first place in Section I of the City League yesterday, defeating Schenley, 14 to 0, in a hard-fought battle in the Westinghouse Stadium. A capacity turnout witnessed the struggle.

The teams battled on even terms during the first two periods, but in the third quarter, Dalfonso hurled a pass to McMahon for a touchdown. Dalfonso then booted a placement for the extra point.

In the fourth quarter, Dalfonso ran 23 yards for another score and again added the extra point. The lineup:

Schenley—0.		Westinghouse—14.
R. Smith	L.E.	Shullo
Steffan	L.T.	Barone
Economas	L.G.	Bauer
Sufrong	C.	Radick
Oates	R.G.	Gigiotti
DeVilling	R.T.	Maneila
Lemmon	R.E.	Hussing
Robinson	Q.	Connelly
Left	L.H.	Frecker
Cicero	R.H.	McMahon
Patrick	F.B.	Dalfonso

Westinghouse ..... 0 0 7 7—14
Touchdowns—McMahon, Dalfonso. Goals from touchdown—Dalfonso 2 (placement kicks). Referee—McLaren. Umpire—Swango. Linesman—Logidice.

SOUTH DEFEATED

In another City League game, Peabody defeated South, 13 to 7, Roberts scoring in the third period and Grad in the fourth and Glass tallying for the losers in the final quarter.

Mt. Lebanon walloped Carnegie, 18 to 7 in a non-league fray, Davidson scoring twice and Kennedy once for Mt. Lebanon, and Spotzky going over for Carnegie. Langley beat Crafton, 6 to 0, an intercepted pass and a subsequent 60-yard run by Dignan bringing the touchdown in the third quarter. Carrick ran wild against Brentwood, winning 32 to 0.

In a Section II contest, Perry defeated Oliver, 7 to 0. A 50-yard march by the Perry eleven in the third period resulted in Manning, quarterback star, plunging over for the touchdown.

HOMESTEAD WINS

Homestead defeated its old rival Duquesne, 15 to 0, in a night contest at Homestead, destroying the championship chances of the Dukes. Scottdale and South Union tied, 6 to 6; Charleroi whipped California, 13 to 0.

Coraopolis routed Ben Avon 33-0; Springdale upset Pitcairn, 12 to 6; Arnold defeated Millvale, 12-0; Glassport won over Elizabeth, 6-0; Stowe nosed out Bellevue, 12 to 6, and Edgewood won again, defeating Oakmont, 26 to 0.

DODGERS GET END

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Benny Friedman, captain and manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Professional Football League, has announced the purchase of Chuck Braidwood, an end, from Hofstra College.

The Rise of Joe Cronin

From High School Team to Pirates at 18 —Manager of Washington Senators at 26

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

NO. 6—A MAJOR LEAGUE MANAGER

Scouts Chick Fraser and Joe Engle made the journey from Omaha to Kansas City together. The smart sleuth of the Senators realized that Fraser would not take him on any wild goose chase and he was quick to change his tourist plans when Fraser hinted there might be a likely looking shortstop on the end of a different trail.

Upon their arrival at the Kansas City park, Fraser inquired of Engle:

"What would you be willing to offer for a promising shortstop, Joe?"

Joe Cronin

"I can go as high as $10,000."

Fraser continued:

"O. K.; now you go over in the third base stands and watch that kid at that base for Kansas City. His name is Cronin. You sit by yourself and draw your own conclusions."

PURCHASE ARRANGED

Chick then approached one of the owners of the Kansas City team and remarked in a casual manner that may have taken the magnate off his guard:

"How is young Cronin going?"

The magnate, who apparently knew more about the front office than he did about playing skill, replied:

"Not so good—I don't know but what I would sell him if I could get that $7,500 back."

Fraser added:

"Will you sell him for that money?"

The magnate retorted:

"Yes, I'll give him up for the same sum."

BRINGS $7,500 PRICE

The game over, Engle joined Fraser.

Chick asked:

"Well, Joe, how did you like that boy?"

Engle answered:

"There's something about his actions I like. He looks good to me."

Fraser went on:

"Will you give $7,500 for him?"

Engle replied:

"You bet I will!"

Chick then sought the owner and probably threw him off his balance when he informed him he had a purchaser for Cronin. The deal was closed.

The Pirate scout then located Joe by telephone. The latter had no idea his friend was in the city and, naturally, he was glad to hear his familiar voice. Fraser asked Joe how he would like to go back to the big show and Cronin was highly agreeable. Chick inquired how long it would take Joe to get ready and the boy retorted:

"I'm ready right now!"

JOE MAKES GRADE

From that day on Cronin proceeded to vindicate the judgment of two scouts who thought there was baseball greatness in the makeup of the likable San Franciscan.

Joe played 63 games in the shortfield for the Senators after reaching Washington in midseason of 1928. His batting mark was only .243 and Walter Johnson, Washington manager, was said to be a bit dubious about his recruit.

Cronin helped to settle the big issue from the very day he reported in the spring of 1929. He took part in 145 battles and batted .282.

VOTED 'MOST VALUABLE'

The greatest shortstop since Wagner flashed on the baseball panorama in 1930. Joe Cronin had "arrived." He needed no calling card to impress Babe Ruth, who picked him on his All-America team, and he had shown enough skill, character and personality to cause Connie Mack to offer what was reported as $125,000 for his services. A fitting climax was given Joe's career when the American League committee named him as the "most valuable" player of the season.

A boy-manager, Cronin faces an exacting test. It may seem somewhat strange to pit one so young against such great leaders as Connie Mack and Joe McCarthy, but irrepressible youth is a wonderful thing, especially when it thrives on responsibility.

Don't feel too sorry for Joe Cronin in his new role.

BOBCATS WIN OVER SALEM

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Scoring 20 points in the first two periods, West Virginia Wesleyan's Bobcats coasted to a 20-to-0 victory over Salem College yesterday.

Opening with a strong offensive, Wesleyan ran and plunged the ball from the 50-yard mark to the four-yard line in an advance feature by Art Bachtel's 20-yard dash. Beveridge scored the first touchdown and Bachtel place-kicked the extra point. The second touchdown came three minutes later in the first period. Hall passing 35 yards to Spears for the touchdown. Bachtel missed a placement, his first failure after a string of seven straight.

With a minute of play left in the second period, Edmundson intercepted Mazza's pass on Wesleyan's 25-yard line and dashed 50 yards before being stopped by Mazza. Art Bachtel then passed over the goal to Coleman for another touchdown and Bachtel place-kicked the extra point. That ended the scoring for the day.

The lineup:

Wesleyan—20.		Salem—0.
White	L.E.	Kelley
Diantonio	L.T.	Hogue
X. Mazzel	L.G.	Bitzer
Edmundson	C.	Zimowski
Greer	R.G.	Pearce
Cordyce	R.T.	Clifton
Spears	R.E.	Bowen
Howell	Q.	Mazza
Hall	L.H.	Tiberi
A. Bachtel	R.H.	Neidecker
Beveridge	F.B.	Menzel

Score by periods:
Wesleyan ..... 13 7 0 0—20

Scoring: Wesleyan touchdowns—Beveridge, Spears and Coleman. Points after touchdown—Art Bachtel (2 placements). Officials: Carr, referee; Kahn, umpire; Ward, linesman.

KETCHEL VICTOR

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Billy Ketchel, of Millville, N. J., won a 10-round decision over Billy Angelo, of Leiperville, Pa., in the feature bout of a boxing card last night. There were no knockdowns. Ketchel weighed 160, Angelo 157½.

Independent Game
McKeesport Olympics vs Christy Park, McKeesport.

SANDLOT GRID TEAMS SET

The East Liberty Papales will play their first game of the season at the Washington boulevard grounds tomorrow afternoon as they tackle West View.

Coach Tony Sweet sent the boys through a strenuous workout last evening. All of the players are in good shape. Hymie Goldberg is to start at quarterback, with Boots Klinzing and Joe Morbito at the halves, and with Kaiser at fullback. This is one of the classiest backfields in the Conference.

Andy Vusky, Bellaire manager, was in town yesterday and took time out to drop in and say that Ducky Holmes will be in the lineup against the J. P. Rooneys tomorrow. Coach Hart Morris has the Eagles primed for the invasion of the Big Green.

At McKeesport, the fans are awaiting the battle between Christy Park and the Olympics, set for Olympia Park.

BLUEFIELD WINS

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—The Rambling Reds, of Bluefield College registered their fifth consecutive victory of the season yesterday by defeating Armstrong College, 39 to 7. Shadle scored on the fourth play after the kickoff. Other Bluefield touchdowns were made by Lenoir, Pike, Radochio, Steele and another by Shadle.

All-America Weekly Grid Ratings

By CHRISTY WALSH

Member All-America Board of Football. (Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

The following 10 players have been given All-America rating by reason of outstanding performance in their respective games played last week. Each player mentioned will receive a Card of Merit, issued by the All-America Board of Football:

RILEY—Northwestern, Warren Brown, Chicago Herald-Examiner, rates Bill Riley as Northwestern's standout performer against Michigan, Illinois and Purdue. Last Saturday was his top game. It runs in the family. Brother of Jack Riley last year's greatest tackle.

HITCHCOCK—Auburn, Alabama. This boy is the new rave from the South. Ed Danforth, Atlanta Georgian, and Zipp Newman, Birmingham News, indulge in telegraphic adjective contest to give Hitchcock superiative rating. They say he beat the great Tulane champions almost single-handed, with two runs of 60 yards each. Carried ball 11 times for 97 yards and completely overshadowed the great Zimmerman.

ARIAH—Auburn, Alabama. Another Dixie dynamiter. He blew the Green Wave to pieces at New Orleans. He took out safety man for Hitchcock on both touchdown runs. "In my opinion," wires Bill Keefe, Times-Picayune, "without Ariail, Auburn would have lost."

NISBET HALTS BEARS

NISBET—Washington. Again Royal Brougham, of Seattle Post-Intelligencer, rates Nisbet All-America. Big Dave played 60 minutes against the Golden Bears and stopped every California play around his end.

MANDERS—Minnesota. Two hundred-pound fullback, who wrecked Iowa's aerial attack. A grand defensive player, and he hasn't missed kicking goal after touchdown in three seasons. Rated All-America by Lou McKenna, St. Paul Pioneer Press.

MONNETTE—Michigan State. He played marvelous defensive football from whistle to whistle. His 80-yard dash from the first scrimmage of the game crossed Fordham's goal for the first time this year. Monnette was a steady, slashing ground-gainer for 60 minutes without a rest.

WILLIAMS—California. Sent in for Schaldach, the team's backfield ace, Arleigh Williams straight-armed his way through 47 yards of mud and rival tacklers to score the tying touchdown and then add the point that won the game. His wonderful kicking of a soggy ball kept Washington in a hole all day, according to Ed Hughes, San Francisco Chronicle.

TROJAN STAR PICKED

SMITH—Southern California. Get this—From Milt Phinney, Oakland Tribune: Ernie Smith, 215-pound tackle, rates all-America principally because he stopped the Stanford reverses in their tracks. In addition, he kicked off with plenty of distance, kicked point after touchdown and did part of the Trojan punting.

M'MICHAEL—Colorado Aggies. This 215-pound tackle was chief contributor to victory over Colorado University by one-point margin. Nearly every Aggie gain went through holes opened by McMichael. Scouted and rated all-America by Pos Parsons, of Denver Post.

KURTH—Notre Dame. Walter Willey, South Bend News Times, rates Kurth all-America because he was chiefly responsible for holding Carnegie to two first downs through the line. This giant of the Irish front wall tore big holes in the defense and was a power in the Notre Dame attack.

Bearcat Eleven Wins Over Thiel

LATROBE, Pa., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Playing their first game of the season at home, the St. Vincent Bearcats yesterday won their third victory of the season when they defeated Thiel, 19 to 6.

The Bearcat defense proved too strong for the losers, except in the third period when the Thiel players broke through to score their only touchdown.

Harry Paul, Latrobe boy, starred for the St. Vincent team with two touchdowns. Connors tallied the third. Snyder and Schemick played well for the losers, the latter scoring.

The lineup:

St. Vincent—19.		Thiel—6.

Panther Freshmen Beat W. Va. Cubs

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—By scoring in the last few minutes of play, the Pitt Freshmen defeated the Little Mountaineers of West Virginia in a thrilling football game before 3,000 spectators here last night, 7 to 0.

Malarkey punched the line for a touchdown after a Pitt kick had placed West Virginia against its own goal and a subsequent punt by West Virginia had been returned 16 yards to the 9-yard line. The lineup:

Pitt—7.		W. Virginia—0.

BELMONT WINS AGAIN OVER M'TIERNAN

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

It seems it just isn't in the wood for Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, to defeat his bitterest foe, Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock. They met last night for the third time, in the main bout of the weekly show in the Arena, on the North Side, and Belmont turned in his third victory.

Not only that, but Jimmy came close to duplicating his knockouts of the first two battles, last summer a year ago, in the Meyers Bowl. He nailed Buck with a left hook to the jaw that made the latter hold in the sixth round, and, in the following session, whipped home another left hook as Buck stood measuring him for a right in a neutral corner and sent McTiernan dipping head first over the lower rope onto the ring platform for a count of eight. In the last round, another left hook shook up Buck and split his right eye.

EVEN AT START

For the first five rounds it was a fairly even thing, with Belmont the aggressor and the heavier hitter, especially to the body, and Buck the better boxer. McTiernan landed his best punch of the fight in the fourth round, when he made Belmont's knees buckle with a clean right to the jaw. Thereafter it was all Belmont. Buck, slower than formerly, and moving in to attack on a straight line, was a target for vicious counters to the body which took the steam out of his own punch, and those left hooks to the jaw did the rest.

McTiernan weighed 158½ pounds and Belmont only 150½ at 3 p. m.

Two quick finishes in the preliminaries helped to get the crowd home early. Jack Wilson, North Side middleweight, battered Ray Lyle, of Akron, who recently fought a sensational battle against Anson Green in the same ring, into a technical knockout defeat in two rounds, the referee stopping the bout at the end of the second frame because of a bad eye injury suffered by Lyle. Ray never had a chance. Wilson was too rangy and too aggressive for him and punched much too straight against the Ohioan's short hooks and swings.

BUSH SCORES KAYO

Red Bush, of Cumberland, Md., scaling only 167½ pounds and outweighed 22 pounds by Ray Jennings, Homestead Negro, scored the hit of the show when he reached up and tagged his big opponent on the chin with a right after a little preliminary sparring and stretched Jennings for the full count, all inside of 25 seconds of the opening round. It was a clean-cut job.

Johnny Riske, of the South Hills, defeated Bill Nichy, of the North Side, in a middleweight opener.

KNAPP GIVEN I. L. PROBLEMS

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—The International Baseball League, striving to untangle the financial problems of the Toronto club and the complex contractural relations of Jersey City and the Brooklyn Dodgers, has decided to let President Charles H. Knapp, of Baltimore, solve the difficulties.

Representatives of seven of the eight clubs yesterday appointed President Knapp as a committee of one to investigate and act. They also decided to lower the player limit from 20 to 18, reduce the salary limit from about $60,000 to $44,000 and to again play 168 games, starting April 12 and closing September 17.

Texas Tech Routs Irish B Eleven

LUBBOCK, Tex., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—The B team was taught things about the Notre Dame football system it probably never knew before last night and the Texas Tech Matadors whipped the Ramblers, 39 to 0.

The Notre Dame B team played the Tech B team on fairly even terms for the first quarter, but Pete Cawthon's first-stringers were too much for the visitors. The opening touchdown was made in the second quarter after a 58-yard pass, Crites to Hitchcock.

Polo Campaign Opens Tonight

The local indoor polo season will open tonight in the Hunt Armory, East End, as the 107th Field Artillery riders tangle with the South Park team in a non-league contest.

The contest is scheduled to get under way at 8:45 o'clock. The lineup:

Artillery.	Pos.	South Park.
Kiser	No. 1	Wagner
J. Voltz	No. 2	Buck Voltz
Watson	No. 3	Loether

Referee—Maj. E. L. Hubbard.

MORRIS-HARVEY BOWS

DAYTON, O., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Morris-Harvey College, of Barboursville, W. Va., took an 18-to-0 trouncing last night from a powerful University of Dayton eleven that allowed the Golden Eagles not one first down as against their own 16.

DRAKE DEFEATED

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Grinnell's deceptive passing and running attack befuddled a slow moving Drake football team to give the Pioneers a hard-earned 7-to-0 victory in the Bulldogs' homecoming last night.

What happens in the huddle out on the gridiron as tense, excited players stick their heads together before a crucial play rarely becomes known to the outside world.

But one good story that took place in a huddle comes from the lips of Andy Kerr, head coach at Colgate.

In the 1931 Colgate-Syracuse game, with Coach Kerr's team leading, 14-0, Syracuse started a drive that ended in a touchdown and changed the score to 14-7.

Rallying behind Johnny Litster, hard-driving fullback, Colgate carried the ball straight down the field on line plays without using a single forward pass and scored a third touchdown to ward off the Syracuse threat and make victory a certainty.

A moment later, Colgate had the ball on the Syracuse 26-yard line and Bob Samuel, aggressive sophomore quarterback, again called Litster's signal as Colgate went into their huddle.

In vain the tired fullback protested:

"Say, listen, I'm worn out. I've carried the ball three out of four plays all afternoon. Give it to someone else."

Quick as a flash, Samuel snapped back:

"I'm running this team. I called your signal and you'll carry the ball."

The huddle broke up and the weary Litster, stung by the remark, plunged through to Syracuse's three-yard line for his longest gain of the day.

But the crowd saw only a tired fullback on the winning team making a desperate effort to score for NO apparent reason whatever.

TROJANS BEST ON COAST--POP

WARNER'S SELECTIONS

Standford, U. C. L. A. a toss-up.
Wash. State over Montana.
Washington over Whitman.
California over Nevada.
Oregon over Gonzaga.
Oregon State over West Coast Army.
St. Mary's, Santa Clara a toss-up.

By GLENN S. (POP) WARNER

The result of last Saturday's games on the Pacific Coast left no doubt of the fact that the University of Southern California, when keyed up to its full strength, is the best team in the Far West. Until the Trojans met Stanford their opposition had not been considered of sufficient strength to get them "het up," and as a consequence they did not look very impressive.

Pop Warner

On the other hand, Stanford put out everything it had in all its games, and had done so well that its supporters figured upon at least an even chance against Howard Jones' team.

But the Trojans were steamed up and going under full pressure against Stanford, and it was simply a case of a good light-heavy weight meeting a top notch real heavyweight, and with the usual result, Southern California has big men, mature men, experienced men and hard-hitting, fast and clever men. They were just too big and tough for Stanford, and they will be plenty tough for every other team in their schedule when they are keyed up to their best efforts as they were last week.

TROJANS TITLE FAVORITES

Southern California and U. C. L. A. are the only undefeated Coast Conference teams, and at this writing the indications are that Southern California is the best team and very likely to win the Conference championship.

There should be a battle royal for second place between U. C. L. A., Washington, Washington State, Oregon, California and Stanford—the former being still undefeated and the others having each lost one game. Even the mighty Trojans might yet lose a game if some team catches them on their heels.

STANFORD FACES TEST

The most important conference game this week-end is that between the unbeaten U. C. L. A. team and Stanford. Bill Spaulding has a fine team this year, and if there is any letdown by Stanford following its downfall at the hands of Southern California it is likely to result disastrously for the Indians. U. C. L. A. rested last Saturday while Stanford went through an extremely hard-fought battle. The game looks like a toss-up to me. The only other conference game is that between Washington State and Montana, and the former should have no difficulty winning that one.

Plantation Manager's Pet Airdale Is Victim of Spitting Cobra

CHAPTER XV.

Joe Winter was the manager of a big rubber plantation 50 miles north of Singapore. I had recently made a minor contribution to it—an Airedale I had brought from America—and Joe was almost embarrassingly grateful. Every planter likes to have at least one good dog on his place. The type of dog available in Johore is a stupid mongrel, so Joe welcomed the gift of the smart and lovable "Bunkie," to which he soon became attached. Dog and master were inseparable, and my friend, placing too high a valuation on my gift, never could do enough for me.

Joe, over a gin sling, was accusing me of being unsociable—or unbusinesslike. Or both. He was pointing out that several weeks had elapsed since I had visited him at the plantation. If I wanted to deprive myself of fine home-cooked meals—Joe had one of the best cooks in the East—all well and good. It's a man's privilege to give his stomach a raw deal if he wants to.

But a chap has no right neglecting his business, and if I didn't see the wisdom of taking advantage of the fact that his company was clearing off another thousand acres to be planted in rubber, then—

"I didn't know you had that job under way," I spoke up. I remembered, of course, that Joe's company had long been considering the advisability of clearing off another huge tract of heavy jungle.

WELCOME OPPORTUNITY

Joe accused me of not knowing what was going on. His company, he said, had recently made a deal with a contractor who specialized in clearing off heavy jungle, and even now 80 choppers were at work removing the big trees and thick brush.

"Come up with your boys for a week, Frank, and if you don't get some wonderful specimens, it's your own fault."

A collector of wild animals doesn't have to be told how lucky he is to have a chance to mop up in the wake of woodchoppers working in dense jungle, full of wild life. Accompanied by a group of natives skilled in the catching of animals, he can reap a real harvest.

This particular stretch of Johore wilderness was packed with specimens that I wanted. It was the home of the rafflii, the most beautiful of the squirrels, an animal whose head and hindquarters are a velvety black, its forequarters a snowy white and its belly a bright red. Here also were to be found the white-handed and silvery gibbon, the binturong (popularly known as the bear cat), the honey bear, the brush-tail porcupine, the red-crested green wood-partridge, the python, the yellow-banded mangrove snake, the black cobra (known as the spitting cobra) and other important specimens.

A DREADED DEMON

I had standing orders for all these. Of the species mentioned I was particularly anxious to secure at least one good specimen of the spitting cobra, a dreaded demon known throughout the East as the implacable foe of all living creatures. Give it a chance and your reward for meeting this gruesome reptile will be twin jets of a deadly amber-colored poison squirted at your eyes. It always shoots at its victim's eyes, and its aim is accurate at any range up to about four feet.

India and Malaya are full of conflicting stories as to what happens to you if this poison hits your optics. There are those who tell you that temporary blindness sets in, resulting in a serious and permanent impairment of vision. Others would have it that this impairment is only temporary. Still others will tell you that if there is the tiniest scratch near your eyes when the horrible fluid hits them, death is your portion; and there are those uncompromising chaps who claim that, scratch or no scratch, you die.

During my many years as a collector I had sifted these various stories and had become pretty well convinced that the poison of the spitting cobra was not essentially different from that of the other species. If it gained entrance to the blood stream, it would kill, and the slightest scratch or opening in the skin would insure its deadly penetration. But if there was no scratch or abrasion, it acted merely as an irritant, which probably would be painful to any delicate surface like the eye, but whose ill effects would eventually pass off.

DOG IS VICTIM

The spitting cobras I had brought back to America had fortunately never given me any test of my theories. And my plan was to keep on handling them so cautiously—and I don't mind saying that I take no unnecessary risks with these or any other creatures—that I would go through life without knowing first-hand just what does happen when a black cobra aims for your eyes and hits his target.

I accepted Joe's invitation and went to his place a few days later with Ali and two other expert Malay animal boys.

The morning after my arrival I took a walk with Joe, who was accompanied by his ever-present Airedale, to the stretch of jungle where the choppers were working. Ali joined us as we entered the clearing.

Suddenly the wandering Bunkie, who had stopped beside a felled tree, started barking furiously. It didn't take me long to know what it was all about. In the shadow of the fallen timber I could see a black cobra's head raised six inches off the ground, with hood spread.

Frantically Joe yelled to the dog in an effort to call him off. The reckless Bunkie remained where he was, toying with destruction. In his excitement he probably didn't hear Joe's voice, or was too fascinated by the creature in front of him to respond. Joe picked up a heavy stick and made for the log.

"Keep away from that snake!" I shouted.

Joe had hardly completed his first stride when Bunkie started backing away whiningly. Shaking his head queerly he emitted as plaintive a howl as I've ever heard from an animal in distress. He was rubbing one eye with his right paw, then the other with his left.

"Cobra spit!" shrieked Ali. "Cobra spit!"

OWNER IS ENRAGED

The dog was now running around in circles, his howling dying down to an agonized whimper. As he swung round aimlessly he hit a heavy branch and toppled over, righting himself with the halting movements of the sightless. The animal was unquestionably blinded.

The snake had spat its twin streams of poison. That was plain—though none of us had been close enough to see the thin lines of amber fluid shoot through the air on their way to their target. Having delivered its blow, the cobra had glided back under the log. It would be another day before his poison sacs would refill sufficiently to enable him to spit again, but there was nothing to prevent his striking in the regulation manner. And it meant death if he managed to sink his fangs.

"He's ruined my dog, the slimy ——!" Joe yelled. "And I'm going to bash his head in!"

He called over some near-by choppers. "Roll that log back!" he commanded.

"Don't!" I countermanded, waving the men away.

Turning to me angrily, Joe cried, "What do you mean by—"

He didn't trouble to finish his sentence. If the men wouldn't roll the log back—and it was obvious that they had no desire to get so close to the snake—he would kill the reptile where it lay, partly visible under the log. Advancing close enough to strike, he took a fresh grip on the stick in his hand and raised it over his head. I seized him by the arm and wrenched the stick away.

Eyes blazing, Joe demanded to know what I meant by protecting the grisly thing that had blinded his dog.

"Leave the snake to me, Joe," I said. "I know how to handle these brutes. You look after the dog. Maybe you can save him if you act quickly."

Haggerty to Join Hoya Grid Staff

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Jack Haggerty, star backfield member of the New York Giants of the National Professional Football League, has asked Tim Mara, Giants' owner, for his release so that he might join Georgetown University's coaching staff.

Haggerty declined to disclose whether he was to replace Head Coach Tommy Mills at Georgetown or was to join the staff simply as an assistant.

It was understood that Haggerty would be released by the Giants after the National League game with Portsmouth tomorrow.

Cal. Tech Runner Dies After Grind

PASADENA, Cal., Oct. 29.—(AP.)—Thomas Jackson, 19-year-old California Institute of Technology student and athlete, died yesterday shortly after he had finished a four-mile run at Tournament Park, near his school. Physicians said death was due to a heart attack induced by the strain of the long run.

Jackson was the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Jackson, wealthy Pasadena residents.

Actress Files Suit In 'Divorce Mecca'

MUSIC

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Syria Mosque

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitsky, leading, played the opening concert in the Pittsburgh Orchestra Association series in Syria Mosque last night. The audience reluctantly showed its appreciation of the high qualities of this orchestra until the finale of the symphony brought an outburst of applause, and no wonder.

Mr. Lissfelt

The program was for all tastes, not even the most exacting classicist might cavil. Resurrected Corelli for the Boston players is like wearing one's best bib and tucker, for their string choir is phenomenal and, singing alone in this Eighteenth century music, its best is undisguised. Embellishments that are difficult enough for soloist fall from their bows and fingers in the most precise unison.

The Ravel ballet music was momentary respite, a carnival before the more sombre joy of Brahms. And of this music and its players we speak with reverence. For we have heard music better than which we shall likely never hear again in this life.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Louisa Invites Daughter of Widow to House for Indefinite Stay

CHAPTER IX.

Mrs. Sheldon went to her room and sat down at her secretary, the old one which she had brought with her from her father's house. She stared at it thoughtfully, drew a sheet of paper toward her, took up her pen,

For over an hour she sat there making no marks upon the fine, crested linen. Then she dipped her pen in the ink and wrote, unhurried but without hesitancy.

"My Dear Ella:

"I have been thinking of you so much during the past months, wondering how you are and why I have not heard from you. I write now to ask something of you. I want you to send me Elizabeth. As you know, Lennox is attending Columbia. He is away a great deal, he is busy with his friends, his studies, his social recreations. I am lonely in this great house. Henrietta is still with us, but she is not growing younger, she is ailing much of the time. I have always regretted that no daughters came to bless my home and to companion me in my middle years. If I may have Elizabeth I promise you she shall be as my own. I will provide teachers for her. I will travel with her, she shall have every advantage, culturally and socially. On my death, she shall be independent. I have always been fond of her. Her last picture shows me a sweet, innocent face, charming and loveable. Think it over, talk with her, see if she is willing to come to me, if you are willing to part with her. We would come to see you, you would not be wholly cut off from her. I feel that it will be a great happiness to me to have her, that it will be happiness for Lennox, too, to have a little sister in the house.

"Let me hear from you soon. If you decide to let her come, I will send my maid to Boston to bring Elizabeth to me. Do not bother about clothes, I will provide everything.

"I know I am asking a great sacrifice of you, but I feel that you will never regret it.

"Affectionately your friend,

"LOUISA LENNOX SHELDON."

LOUISA CONFIDENT

She reread the letter, set it aside. After a time she sealed it in the envelope, addressed it and sat back in her chair, her eyes resting thoughtfully on the small white square.

Ella Howland was a very distant connection of Louisa's. She was a sister of the improvident, well-bred man who had married Louisa's sister, Emmeline. Emmeline was dead, her husband was heaven knew where. But Ella remained in Boston, a widow with three daughters and a very little money—a small income, safely invested, enough perhaps for one but not for four. The two eldest daughters were public school teachers. Elizabeth, the baby, was now 18. Mrs. Sheldon had seen her a year and a half previously while on a visit to the Lennoxes. A simple child, graceful, docile.

Louisa smiled. She had no doubt of the answer. Ella would read the letter through tears of pious joy. And she would write, gushing with gratitude—my little girl this, my little girl that.

The child herself would be glad to come. It was not in nature that she would not be. Louisa remembered the small, moth-eaten house in the unfashionable district, the made-over clothes. Elizabeth had probably never owned a new dress in her life.

REALLY DISLIKES GIRL

Mrs. Sheldon rang for the butler, gave him the letter to mail. She watched him out of the room and rose, stiffly, to her feet, and went to the windows. Her room faced the Square. After a time she saw him emerge from the house and cross the street. Her fancy could hear the metallic, final sound of the letterbox flap dropping into place.

For an instant she had an impulse to run after him, to bid him, by any means, reclaim the letter.

Too late.

Well, she must submit to having her household upset, the even tenor of her ways disturbed, must be resigned to the intrusion of something young and thoughtless, not her own.

Lennox and Elizabeth Howland. With care, it could be managed.

Suddenly she was aware that she had lied in her letter to Ella. She had written, "I have always been fond of her." A graceful, conventional phrase. She had never examined into the state of her feelings toward the girl. Now she knew that she disliked her cousin's child. Curious, she had not realized it a few minutes ago. Had she been hasty?

She turned from the windows. Not accustomed to facing fear she did not recognize it when she encountered it.

Elizabeth's coming occasioned no apparent upheaval of nature, no stars strayed from their courses, the heavens did not cry out in warning.

ELIZABETH EXCITED

Elizabeth's mother, upon the arrival of the letter was tearful and triumphant. Her thoughts and speech were as panicky as guinea fowl, as shrill, as undirected—my little girl—to leave me—I cannot possibly—so good of Louisa—of course the child will be company for her—Lennox, now, such a nice boy as I remember him—handsome—all the advantages—my little Betty—not a thing fit to wear—where did we put the good packing trunk?—telegraph—no, write first—I can't bear to think of the house without her—we mustn't stand in her light.

Elizabeth herself was an animated exclamation mark! New York! Away from this stuffy house and the slippery horsehair furniture and Fanny's last year's dress and Alice's year-before-last coat. Out of it! Theaters! Dances! Frocks and slippers! She talked, questioned, answered, at random. "I don't remember Lennox, Mother. Was he dark or fair? No, of course, Alice, Columbia isn't Harvard!"

"But I'll miss them," she thought, lying awake through the long, last nights. She tried to see, with her eyes shut, her mother's harried face. She thought lovingly of her sisters, she cried a little and laughed a little more and was genuinely horrified to mark how the features of her own people blurred into the dark.

EXPLAINS TO SON

What did Lennox look like? How had Cousin Louisa ever come to send for her? What relation were they really? Not cousins. Oh, it was all too complicated.

Louisa, folding up the telegram which had followed Ella's agitated, incoherent, acquiescent letter, smiled, with her lips. The girl would come. So far, so good. She cast a dismayed glance about her room, about, mentally, the entire house. An intruder—a stranger—a stupid, emotional girl. She asked herself, "Have I done wisely?"

She told Lennox, after the plans were made, and very casually,

"I've invited Elizabeth Howland for an indefinite visit."

"Elizabeth?" He knitted his brows. "Oh, of course. But I don't remember her very well. Long-legged kid, wasn't she, when I saw her last?"

His mother winced. She disliked slang fastidiously and legs intensely. She answered, carefully,

"I do not imagine that you would remember her. She was very young the last time you were in Boston."

After a moment he asked, not caring particularly, "Indefinite visit you said? But why, exactly?"

Mrs. Sheldon explained, patiently,

"Ella Howland is very badly off, indeed. Three daughters and so little money. I have been thinking for some time that I would like a companion. Cousin Henrietta is not at all well. And you are away all day. Soon you will be taking your place in your father's business, and you will be even more away from me. You will marry, will set up your own establishment. It occurred to me that I would not only be benefiting Ella but myself if she permitted me to take the responsibility of her daughter. I had even thought of adopting her, but that can wait until we see how things work out. I think we can find interests and amusements for the child. I live quietly, of course, but it will be a complete change from her very limited surroundings."

Lennox smiled. He had not seen his mother as expansive in some time. Never, now that he thought it over. Since the episode of the latchkey she had been very noticeably withdrawn from him. Perhaps with a girl to—he termed it, fuss over—she might turn her attention from him.

"You're always doing things like this. I don't mean adopting children, of course, but being, oh, awfully kind and generally benevolent in a quiet way. I wonder if you'll like her?"

His mother's face softened at the careless praise. It was quite true, her purse was always open to the unfortunate. She did not commit indiscriminate charity, but she was a rock of strength to distressed people. Not sympathetic perhaps, not impulsive, but generous with her money, her time, her advice.

She fed the hungry, she clothed the naked, she succored the suffering. She obeyed, and very strictly, the letter of the law.

"Ella Howland's daughter could not be anything but likeable," was all she answered.

Synopsis

Mrs. Louisa Lennox Sheldon is idolatrous in the love of her son, Lennox, a student at Columbia. His father, who died when the boy was but 9, had been gay spirited, so much so that his puritanical wife became cold to him. She sought to cast the son in an altogether different mold, making a Fauntleroy out of him during his childhood years and keeping him as much as possible from associating with other children. Lennox goes out to a studio party with some fellow-students, meets a gay young showgirl of the prevalent Gibson type, dances with her, has a few drinks, kisses her, tiptoes into his house in the wee sma' hours. After that Louisa decides that he must marry young and plans to pick his wife.

Now Go On

Louisa smiled. She had no doubt of the answer.

Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Marion No Longer Cares for Owen

I made a swift mental computation as Hugh Grantland said that he would be gone for a week, in his self-imposed task of watching Samuel Brixton and Charles Owen, and that he would feel better about Lee Chow if he knew that the Chinese was under my care.

"As long as I am here, I shall do everything I can for him," I said, "but I am going into New York the last of next week to stay while my play is being produced. Mr. Veritzen is foolish enough to think he needs me at hand for consultation."

Across his face flitted a look that needed no interpretation to me. It was one that always greeted any mention of Philip Veritzen's name.

"It is only for these first few days that I am concerned," he said. "Lee Chow is recovering rapidly, and one of the nurses will remain in the house, so there really will be nothing for you to do save to cheer his loneliness. Will you be kind enough to leave with Lee Chow your address in the city, for I probably shall not return before you do. If I, or he and I, later find out anything concerning these men which I think it necessary for you to know, I shall communicate with you at once."

He put out his hand and clasped mine.

"Goodbye," he said jerkily, and then he was gone, while I faced the unpleasant prospect of keeping a secret from Dicky and Harry, and above all, Lillian, which they ought to know.

I was grateful for one thing. Hugh had come and gone without anyone in the house except Katie being the wiser, and he had taken back with him the sheet of paper bearing the report of the mysterious colloquy between Brixton and Owen. But after my two readings of the sheet my uncanny memory functioned sufficiently to enable me to repeat to myself every word that Hugh had typed thereon from Lee Chow's shorthand report.

READY TO LEAVE

And repeat it to myself I did, many times in the hectic week that followed. It was a week of "plans and packing, of friction and farewells, of thrills and trumperies," to quote Lillian's smiling comments, upon the day when she, Harry, Dicky, Mary and I were ready to start for the city.

"What's eating you, old dear?" Lillian asked with affectionate concern. "You oughtn't to have a care in the world. Junior, Roderick and Faith are in perfect health and Katherine is at the top of her form to take care of them. Your father and Dicky's mother are unusually well for them; Katie is in fine fettle and Jim is per usual, to be translated 'sterling;' Bill and Hank are safely back in school; your house is in perfect order; you have the most distinctive and successful party that's ever been seen in this neck of the woods, and Phil Veritzen is in high good humor, which augurs a successful production of your play. If anybody ought to be sitting on the top of the world, you should, and yet I'll bet old Atlas didn't have as solemn looking a map as you have. Cheer up! Remember, we're planning to come back every week-end."

GOOD NEWS

"It isn't that," I said, knowing very well what it was that was troubling me and chafing under the necessity of keeping it a secret from Lillian. But I knew her keen intuition so well that I made a tremendous effort to camouflage my worry.

"I'm always blue at leaving the farm," I said lamely. "You know I hate the city, but you—I think you love every skyscraper in it."

"Guilty as charged m'lud," she retorted. "I love it out here, but I'm always glad to get back to the lights and shadows of the great anomaly ever called a city. It fascinates me."

She drew a deep breath and raised her arms over her head.

"I'm so happy that I could enjoy a desert island or a Russian one room apartment," she said. "Marion told me on the way down to school that she never wanted to see Charles Owen again."

"Oh! I'm so glad!" I said, although I had heard the same news from Mary, with whom, to my great delight, Marion was now upon their old friendly terms.

"So am I," she answered, "although, poor baby, she is paying dearly, I am afraid, for her little flurry in elderly romance."

"What about Ronald?" I asked.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Mardi Gras festivities, with prizes for the most original and striking costumes were held at the 16 Warner Theaters today where the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club met.

Nearly every member who attended today's meeting wore some costume depicting the Halloween spirit. After the youngsters had paraded around the theaters scaring each other, a temporary halt was called to these festivities while the stage shows which the managers had arranged were offered for their entertainment.

At the Memorial Theater, McKeesport, the new manager, Louis Gilbert, acted as master of ceremonies and introduced the following acts to the members:

Billy Mossburg sang "My Silent Love," and little Vera Hollywood followed him singing "All Of Me." To the tune of that ever popular number, "The Sidewalks of New York," Jean Brown and Norma Karber offered a specialty tap dance which brought rounds of applause from the little folks in the audience.

ACROBATIC DANCE

Cookie Olsen again tied herself in knots in her acrobatic dance which had all the members say Ah's and Oh's. Dennis Smith offered a fast tap dance and then when the piano player started "A Shanty In Old Shanty Town," Betty Fath arrived in the center of the stage and sang the verse and chorus and then amazed both the youngsters and grown-ups with her dance.

Dorothy Smith sang "Goodbye Blues," and this little lady chased any and all blues that might have been in the theater right out the front door. She had to take two enchors and three curtain calls before the youngsters would let her go. Evelyn Baker sang "I Just Couldn't Say Good-bye," and Jean Brown, who appeared earlier in the program with Norma Karber, came out and sang "Three Is A Crowd," and finished with a tap dance.

To Billy Mossburg, who had the distinction of opening the program, Manager Gilbert gave the honor of singing the last number. He picked as his favorite, "Blackeyes." And so, another successful meeting of the Memorial chapter was brought to a close.

Recently Manager Eddie Johns and his assistant Russell Niggl organized from among the members two stock companies, somewhat on the order of the Edward Vail players, and the first company put on their first stage show today. "Have a Laugh," written and directed by Eddie Johns and Russell Niggl, was the title and from the amount of laughter the members received from this skit, it could have been called "A Laugh a Minute."

It was the story of two German delicatessen store proprietors who also ran a similar store across the street. The action is swift and the stunts that these gentlemen do to entice business from one another kept the audience in a continual howl of laughter.

The cast: Heinie, played by John Hilliard, his partner Adolph was played by Stanley Kane. Dolly, one of the customers, was the newly elected grand jester, Betty Richards. Helen Sherry took the part of Snuggles, and Russell Niggl was Cohen. Alberta Fundi, Dorothy Donaldson and Verda Schaffer were the entertainers.

An Important Game

The Pitt-Notre Dame Clash Holds the Spotlight—Brief Comment on Local News Items.

The football game between Pitt and Notre Dame at the Stadium is the principal news item in Pittsburgh today. It is attracting a far greater crowd than has turned out for any political meeting. The enthusiasm over the game is infectious and has aroused the interest of people who rarely look at the sporting pages.

*The number of out-of-town newspaper correspon*dents, press association representatives, radio and movie men who have come to Pittsburgh to report the game is declared to be unprecedented in the Stadium records. An extra press box had to be built to accommodate the writers. It is pleasant to have a football team that attracts national attention, and should stimulate civic pride and lead to efforts to excel in other things.

It is of no particular consequence so far as the more serious affairs of the world are concerned which team wins today's game; but it is of no little importance that great sections of the population are able to relax for a while, to dismiss the workaday problems from their minds, and give themselves over for a few hours to the enjoyment of sport. Spirited athletic contests make life brighter.

Under the direction of a committee composed of John M. Phillips, John Nicholson and William Grimm, 5,000 Boy Scouts of Allegheny County are planting walnuts today. Mr. Phillips started this good work years ago, influenced in part by the havoc inflicted by the wartime demand for walnut wood for rifle stocks. Since 1916 one troop of Boy Scouts, No. 4 of Carrick, has alone planted 30,000 walnuts.

Hunters and others who frequent the woods and fields should help the Boy Scouts replenish the walnut supply. Gather a few of the nuts, bruise the green hull, without, however, breaking the shell, and plant them in holes four inches deep. With nuts plentiful, Mr. Phillips says, the woods in a few years will be alive with squirrels.

Dr. C. B. Maits, Director of Public Health, reports there has been less diphtheria in the city this year than in any previous year in its history. He attributes this to an intensive campaign for the immunization of children that followed a sharp increase in diphtheria in 1927. He asserts the disease can be completely banished from every home. Certainly the statistics are impressive.

*It is profitable to look back occasionally on condi*tions as they were in an earlier stage of the city's history and compare them with present conditions. It makes for cheerfulness and optimism. Diphtheria was a dreadful disease during the childhood of Pittsburghers who do not regard themselves as old. In the eighth and ninth decades of the last century the mortality rate from diphtheria per 100,000 of population ranged between 140 and 160. Now it is 8.2.

Apropos of disease prevention, Dr. Maits presents in the current number of the department's monthly, "Pittsburgh's Health," some able arguments against curtailment of the city's meat inspection activities. It is hard to see how anyone, after reading the article, could be in favor of sacrificing that branch of the public service in the interest of economy.

Modern science is triumphing not only over disease, but over road-building difficulties that once would have been considered unconquerable. We have in mind the seemingly bottomless Conneaut swamp in Crawford County, which, it is announced, has at last been spanned by the Perry Highway after two years of struggle.

Two hundred and fifty thousand cubic yards of earth were dumped into the bad place in the swamp without much apparent effect. Gov. Pinchot then ordered the work stopped until the best engineering minds could be brought into service in a detailed study of the problem. They hit upon a plan for semi-floating foundations for the road, and the highway is now complete between Pittsburgh and Meadville.

Another great public improvement, which will be of daily service to a multitude of Pittsburghers, will be opened for duty today. It is the West End-North Side Bridge, built at a cost of $3,595,000. The new span over the Ohio unites sections of the city that previously could reach each other only by a long roundabout route.

The new $880,000 Arsenal High School, at Butler and Fortieth streets, is to be dedicated next Friday. Pittsburgh now has 22 high schools. Forty years ago it had only one. The high school population has increased at a rate many times greater than the rate of increase in the general population. The demand for high school education has been one of the chief factors in the rising cost of public education.

The people will be reluctant to economize on the schools. They will appreciate the co-operation of the teachers in moves to save money for the harassed taxpayers. Such cooperation may be forthcoming at the meeting shortly to be held by the State Educational Congress, which is to discuss proposed emergency amendments to the Edmonds Act, the statute that fixes teachers' salaries.

Pittsburgh school teachers who have voluntarily taken a 10 per cent pay cut are matched in generosity by Carnegie Library workers who have agreed to work in the lending department on Sunday afternoons throughout the winter without pay. Readers will be permitted to borrow or return books just as on week days. It is gratifying to observe the more liberal attitude towards Sabbath observance.

Pittsburgh's need of a Town Hall seating at least 15,000 persons is called to attention by a large photograph to be reproduced tomorrow in the Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. It shows a gathering of 35,000 people at Forbes Field listening to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt. If it had been a rainy evening it would have been impossible to hold such a meeting. Our largest auditorium accommodates only 3,850.

One of the interesting features of the American Weekly, distributed as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, will be an article on "Savages of the South Seas," illustrated with five colorful and striking pictures painted by an American woman artist, Miss Caroline Mytinger. She faced danger and overcame many difficulties that she might paint these people in their native villages.

A Two-Fisted Toast -:- -:-

By Nelson Harding

A two-fisted drinker here rises to say:
"I drink both your healths in my big hearted way.
Holding a glass in each hand, you can see,
An ambidextrous performer; that's me!

"Gentlemen, this feat requires great skill,
If from these glasses no contents shall spill!"
Aren't the gentlemen wise to the wink
G. O. P. winks as he rises to drink?

Technique of Love

The beauty parlors have done wonders to preserve a woman's youth; but they don't seem to have done much to make a husband's love last longer.

* * *

Woman's greatest mistake consists in her incurable belief that when a man loses his head he has lost his heart as well.

* * *

A man is not actually old until he has lost his last desire for the food that disagrees with him, the pleasures that keep him poor, and the sort of women who make a fool of him.

Sometimes a man's flattery goes to a woman's head and makes her dizzy; sometimes it goes to her heart and makes her foolish; but most of it goes to her vanity and merely acts as an appetizer—for more.

* * *

Men dress to please women. If you don't believe it, just look at a group of them, after a few days on a hunting or fishing trip, when they are out of range of the feminine eyes.

* * *

Talent is what enables a girl to earn a living without marrying for it—but, nowadays, it takes real GENIUS for her to marry a living without working for it.

* * *

The hardest thing a poor, weak woman has to do in this life is to permit a man to "forgive" her for finding him out, when he thought he had her completely bluffed.

Love, like eating or breathing, is a perfectly natural instinct—but love-making, like cooking, is one of the civilized ARTS, requiring practice, technique and a special talent.

Isn't It So?

Even easy payments may be hard to collect.

The lawyer defends you against everything except his bill.

The average married man may develop plenty of speed, but generally he lacks control.

Travel is not necessary to the study of human nature. There are object lessons at home.

It is a woman's privilege to change her mind, but not when she is driving a high powered car on a congested highway.

AT SEA DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

QUARANTINE, Oct. 29.—In some far away Utopia, I like to imagine voyagers arriving in port to step down the gangplank to taxis for the whirl home without the multiplicity of annoyances climaxing every landing. Quitting a ship should be a liberating thrill. It is, instead, a horror of restrictions.

A ticket, in this rosy Utopia of mine, would include equitable tipping and thus check incessant knocking at the cabin door and running the corridor gantlet of servants with terribly hurt looks. I try to be fair, but I invariably disembark feeling I've done some worthy a dirty trick.

The landing confusion is an uncalled-for burden after six days of dining, dancing, teaing and its frequent dressing requirements. To say nothing of the dockside bustle. Anyway here we are! Edith Wharton describes most of us perfectly "as spending a lifetime seeing everything and understanding nothing."

Quarantine, and the ship edges slowly up the Hudson. Everybody is straining for a glimpse of loved ones on the clamoring pier. Harbor craft are in triumphant toot. Dogs, freed from kennels, yip about, sniffing strange ankles. Faces are a-twitter with animation, nerves keyed to high tension.

So much so, a lady with binoculars a few feet away shrieked "Charlie" and fell stiffly back, like a clothing dummy, to the deck. "It often happens," said the hurriedly summoned ship surgeon. Headline groundlings sort out celebrities. Thus do we return to New York's terrifying energy and lunatic taranta-ra!

In the barber shop today a stodgy, elderly bundle of uncertainties debated whether or not to have her hair bobbed. Her jovial husband was egging her on, and the barber cooed: "But Madame will be far happier!" It suggested coaxing a flame from a sulky log. I left before a decision, but on deck later I noticed she had made the plunge. And was constantly running fingers—like a tongue to an emptied gum—to the back of her head.

* * *

One of the continental tonsorial ministrations for gray hair is a rinse touched up with wash blueing. I knew nothing of it until while my head was under water the sudden change of color took place. "Ah, ah!" I thought. "A hemorrhage or something!" And the barber almost had to lift Old Blue Blood back to the chair. But it's all right. You'd be surprised how silvery and Sailing Baruch I look.

* * *

In boom days, a passenger list always included something like this: J. Thompkins Smythe-Smythe, valet and chauffeur, and Mrs. Townley Sprague, nurse, governess and maid. But on this trip folk are "just folks." The Smythe-Smythes and Townley Spragues of the world may be in tourist. The only person on this boat sporting a valet was Cole Porter, the lucky stiff.

* * *

Like many topics, heavy drinking cannot be generalized, but the fact is the only two persons who left this vessel glee-oriously spiffed were a couple of Frenchmen. I also noticed that few Americans drank anything but beer, and the wine waiter, constantly trumpeting with hay fever, was probably just as well pleased.

* * *

The boat, like so many de luxe boats, returns to the other side for a sabbatical four months. Members of the crew are to be notified when needed. In the meantime they are on their own. Two told me they were quitting the sea for good. "It isn't even a decent living any more," one sighed. "I'm going back to portering in a Marseilles hotel."

* * *

Among those I saw while the gangplank was shoved from the pier, was the director of ceremonials at the White House. It's his job to tell diplomats and other importants what clothes to don, where to sit and decorations to wear. I wanted to ask what he thought about stepping off the boat in a checkered blue shirt, snow-white tie and silver hair-rinse. But I'm so shy I'd probably dig my toe in the deck and scuff up my new shoes. The French ones—with a squeak!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

There are two kinds of people in this world—the kind that can fool themselves, and the kind that can't.

Most people are the first kind. They can fool themselves. They want to fool themselves. They can hide from Truth. They can hide behind smugness and sentimentality and make-believe.

And you can't much blame them. It's natural that they should want to hide.

Truth's a tough thing to face; a rough, ruthless mystery. None of us—not even the wisest of us—really knows what Truth is all about.

And none of us—not even the bravest of us—really likes to face Truth and live with it and for it.

Yet there are a few who will. There are a few people who want to know Truth, whatever the cost; a few people who won't fool themselves.

But, they have a hard time of it.

There isn't much fun, or even much safety in life, for people who won't fool themselves.

They can't make excuses.

They can't run away.

They can't pretend that they are something that they're not.

They can't pretend that things are better than they are.

They have to look at themselves straight.

They have to look at life straight.

It's a cruel ordeal.

It's a terrible challenge.

For if you're going to look at yourself, or at life, in that way, you must do something about it, otherwise you're a fake. You're even worse than a fake. You're a quitter.

If you look at Truth—if you insist on knowing Truth—you must live true. And that, in this frightened, greedy, conceited world, is the hardest job a man can tackle—the saddest, loneliest job a man can tackle.

For human society, as yet, isn't based on Truth. Truth is too much for most people. It requires too much thought; too much risk. So most people hate Truth. Most people prefer to shut their eyes and pretend.

And they hate people who call their bluff and upset their comfort. They hate people who tell them they're pretending. They hate and punish such people. They laugh at them. Ignore them. Gossip about them. Call them nuts. Call them criminals. Drive them out. Crucify them.

Yes, living true is the saddest, loneliest job a man can tackle.

BUT IT'S ALSO THE PROUDEST JOB!

For the man who dares to seek the Truth, dares to face the Truth, dares to live the Truth, really lives like a man and not like an animal. Indeed, he does more—

HE LIVES LIKE A GOD.

That doesn't mean he lives comfortably, or popularly. Come to think of it, a God has probably as uncomfortable and unpopular an existence as possible. No one fixed things pretty for a God. And seldom, if ever, does he get much real applause.

But it must be a pretty big thing for a God to feel that He can do His job without comfort or applause, for the love of the job itself, for the sake of His own self-respect.

AND IT'S A PRETTY BIG THING FOR A MAN TO FEEL THAT WAY TOO; FOR A MAN TO FEEL THAT HE CAN LIVE AS A GOD LIVES, SEEING LIFE AS IT REALLY IS, DARING TO LIVE THE TRUTH.

Yes, there are two kinds of people—those who fool themselves, and those who don't.

Most of us are the first kind, and there's no denying that the first kind get most of the sugar doughnuts.

But there are a few who would rather have a stale, harsh crumb of Truth than any amount of sugar doughnuts. And, it's strange—

THEY ARE THE ONES WHO LIVE ON. THEY ARE THE ONES THIS COWARDLY WORLD NEVER FORGETS—THE ONES WHO HAVE THE COURAGE TO REFUSE TO FOOL THEMSELVES.

Smith Calls Friends To Roosevelt

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

I have voted for Al Smith in conventions and at the polls every time since 1926, and, like millions of others, I listened with intense interest to his fighting speech at Newark over the radio. It was a characteristic Smith speech, rich in sincerity and honesty and in contempt for hypocrisy, pretense and bigotry. No human being can speak with such authority of the campaign of hypocrisy and bigotry waged against him four years ago through a board of strategy having complete confidence and approval.

I have known this, and thought some about it through the early stages of the present campaign, when Hoover managers, who were in on the waging of the most scurrilous and bigoted campaign in history against Smith, were appearing in Boston dripping hypocritical encomiums upon him. I thought I knew what he must have thought, and, I now know, I knew. He has said in fighting language what I thought.

It means that no man or woman pretending to any respect or devotion for Al Smith can register their vote this year for Mr. Hoover, the "dry leader" of the nation, as Smith calls him, who dominated the board of strategy which w[illegible] a campaign of bigotry ag[illegible] him.

* * *

Smith Reminds Us

No man or woman is going to pay a compliment to Al Smith by voting for Mr. Hoover; and we have that from Al Smith.

Memories are short; in these days, when most of us are fighting for existence, it is easy to forget even the most vivid occurrences of four years ago. Mr. Smith's recollections are accurate and vivid as the occurrences themselves. He rendered a service at Newark in bringing them before us.

Thus he recalls Mabel Walker Willebrandt and the appeal to bigotry she delivered before the Methodist Conference in Ohio.

He recalls now, from her own words, that she was a bit ashamed to make the speech; that she asked the Hoover National Committee for release; that she received two telegrams from it instructing her to go ahead.

We all remember that now, that Smith reminds us of it.

* * *

What Has Become of Mr. Walter Newton?

After she had made the speech there was a protest from liberal minded Republicans and there were intimations that she would be withdrawn from the stump. We all remember that now.

And then a statement was given out by the Hoover board of strategy which was headlined in a New York paper September 27, 1928, as follows:

"Mrs. Willebrandt will continue the Smith attack. To speak under the auspices of the Republican National Committee in the South and Midwest."

We all remember that now, that Smith reminds us.

And who sponsored that statement from the Hoover board of strategy?

Mr. Walter Newton.

And what has become of Mr. Walter Newton? Immediately after becoming President, Mr. Hoover made him one of his private secretaries. Thus virtue has its reward.

And we all remember that, now, that Smith has spoken.

And who else was on the board of strategy that devised the kind of campaign that was waged against Smith? The latter tells us:

"And sitting on the board of strategy with Mrs. Willebrandt, outlining the campaign, is no less a personage than the Republican candidate for Governor of the state of New York, Col. Bill Donovan."

And we all remember that, now that Smith reminds us.

And this is Smith's conclusion:

"All the bigotry and intolerance that arose throughout the country because of her remarks can be directly charged to that political committee."

'Nuff said for any intelligent friend of Al Smith, man or woman.

* * *

Let Smith Tell It

But there is nothing more devastating in the Smith fighting speech for Roosevelt and Garner than his analysis of the positions of the two parties on prohibition. Intelligent liberals will be interested in this, for they know that he has been the leader against Mr. Hoover's "noble experiment" for many years.

He is so sincere and earnest on that question that he practically repudiated his own platform four years ago with the telegram he sent to the convention.

When a man of such courage and robust honesty on that question gives advice to real liberals, they will give heed.

He reminds us of the double-dealing of Mr. Hoover's managers on the subject four years ago when they whispered "dry" in dry territory and "wet" in wet territory. This was made possible by calling prohibition a "noble experiment" in a speech by Hoover, and by the promise of Mr. Hoover to appoint a commission to investigate it. But let Smith tell it:

"The drys went into a huddle, and they said, 'He calls it a noble experiment.' Then his friends among the wets said, 'That was just to calm them down. He is going to do something about it because he says it is not all right.'"

Remember that, gentle reader? Of course, you do, now that Smith reminds you. Was it necessary for him to remind you how the report of the committee was 10 to 1 against prohibition, and how the report was misrepresented in the preface, and submitted by Mr. Hoover with the absurd comment that it showed that we must stand by the dry laws?

* * *

The Roll Call of The 'Liberals'

And so many liberals bought gold bricks and lightning rods from the Hoover board of strategy in 1928—and know it now.

Mr. Smith, a real liberal, shows conclusively that it still has gold bricks and lightning rods for sale to suckers.

So many of us are too busy looking for a job since the "elimination of poverty" with "a chicken in every pot," that we have not taken the time to understand just what the Hoover party plan is on prohibition. Smith does it for us. He shows that the Hoover plan merely submits repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment with restrictions that leaves an untenable thing in the Constitution.

That it binds none of their members of House or Senate even to vote for the repeal.

That the purpose was to carry on the hypocrisy of 1928 of being dry in dry territory and wet in wet territory.

That there is no suggestion in it of an immediate modification of the Volstead act to open the breweries and put men to work, and to lighten the burden of taxation by hundreds of millions, almost a billion, through a tax on beer.

And Smith gives us the roll call of the "liberals" who are for Hoover:

"Daniel Poling, president of the allied forces . . . It is also indorsed by Dr. Dinwiddie, president of the National Temperance Bureau and secretary of the prohibition board of strategy. Bishop Richardson, representing the Anti-Saloon League, also indorsed him, and that indorsement is published in the organ of the Ku Klux Klan, known as the Fellowship Forum."

What company for friends of Al Smith!

* * *

He Summons His Friends

He shows that the Democrats stand four square for a straight, honest repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and for the immediate modification of the Volstead Act to bring in revenue and give men jobs—and he summons his friends to Roosevelt's standard as the best way to "bring back prosperity."

No real friend of Al Smith will disregard that summons.
